Americans Can Fly
A Wasted Life
Stocks Wha Hae
Money in the Purse

—By Arthur Brisbane

AMERICANS can fly and prove it. Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, on their way around the world, planning to make the trip "in ten days," if possible, dropped down at the Royal Air Force airdrome in England, at 7:45 a. m., New York time, yesterday. They had crossed the Atlantic ocean in 16 hours and 17 minutes, beating all world's records.

They stayed 40 minutes in England, then started for Moscow via Berlin. Later in the day they landed at Berlin and they expect to be in Moscow today. That would interest Jules Verne, who described a purely imaginary trip around the world in 80 DAYS.

Oklahoma is interested in that flight. Wiley Post lives in Oklahoma City. The flying ship is named Winnie Mae, who is the wife of Leslie Payne, whose father backed the expedition.

Flying will be a "regular business" some day, and soon.

Recently the body of a very young woman was found washed up by the surf near New York. Photographs show that she was most beautiful as a child and a marvelously beautiful girl at 18. The waves washed up a young woman barely 20, ruined by alcohol, drugs and the life to which they lead.

Murder had been suspected, but letters written to a man show that it was suicide. One public official says the letters were forged to shield a murderer, but no murderer could have written the notes. The letters are too genuine.

The unhappy girl writes that she made "a sordid, futureless mess" of her life on earth, did not "want to ruin anybody else's life."

She goes out of this world hoping and believing that there is no life beyond. "If there is an after life, it would be a dirty trick, but I am sure 50,000,000 priests are wrong. Nothing makes any difference now."

"It is no one's fault but my own. I hate every thing so—life is so horrible—I take dope to forget, and drink to try and fool people, but it is on me."

The fault but my own," she wrote. But it is also the fault of a system that permits selling dope and booze, whiskey to young girls. And there are men surviving this girl, who know that it is THEIR FAULT.

"As idle as a painted ship Upon a painted ocean," suddenly came to life, bounding into activity. Issues that had done nothing sold over 300,000 shares in the hurry. Five million shares were sold during the day.

This is a good time NOT TO GAMBLE.

"Put money in the purse," was good advice. Money is frozen labor, that can be released and used as you choose. Money is power. Money, to a large extent, is government. Money says "come," and they come, "go" and they go.

Many, well-meaning, said the great trees in the redwoods of California's belt must be cut, that should be saved. Museums, naturalists, clergymen, all said "Save those trees." Then John D. Rockefeller, Jr., suggested that the best way to save the trees would be to buy and protect them. He agreed to match the money of others, up to one million dollars, and in addition gave another million dollars, given outright. "Money talks." The trees will be saved.

Calvin Coolidge tells readers of his articles in the Chicago Herald & Examiner and other papers that he thinks, with all our industrial distress, "a home on the farm begins to look attractive."

He believes there may come a movement back to the land, that populations will return to the farm and old-fashioned home with diversified crops, fruit, domestic animals, sufficient to meet the household needs."

It is a better home than when Calvin Coolidge knew it, thanks to electric light and power, concrete floors to keep out rats, copper screens to keep out mosquitos, and their chills and fever.

Bankers convicted of inflicting loss and hardship on 400,000 depositors, impoverishing many families, go to prison for three to six years. It is fortunate for them that they were not convicted in Italy under Mussolini.

Those that describe our civilization 500 years hence will report that a poverty stricken man could be sent to jail longer for stealing a pair of boots than a banker could be sent for stealing millions.

KIDNAP TRY SEEN AS PLOT TO KILL GIRL

"Love Diary" and Insurance Policies Cloud Mysterious Attack on Bourne Miss

Discovery of a "love diary" and two insurance policies on the life of Ellen Edstrom, 17, today led Chief of Police William Murdock of Bourne to declare that she was driven from her bedroom early today by "cold-blooded murderers" who intended to slay her for the insurance money.

The pretty Burns high school girl, employed as housekeeper in the home of Charles Johnson, a relative, died in her nightclothes to the home of a neighbor after, she said, she was aroused in her bedroom shortly after 2 a. m. today by two masked men.

The girl's employer later staggered into the home of another neighbor, said he had been bound and gagged by the intruders, and collapsed after telephoning his story to police.

Both he and the girl were being questioned by Chief Murdock after a search of the house had brought to light the insurance policies and the diary, written in crude schoolgirl shorthand.

ENDEARING POEMS.

According to police who examined the journal, it contained accounts of her friendship with youths in Sagamore and Bourne. Although Krefeld, Germany, June 25—For the 13th time in history, the North Atlantic was spanned again in a non-stop flight today when Otto Hillig, wealthy Danish-American photographer, and Holger Hoirlis, Danish-born pilot, landed here from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, and took off an hour and a quarter later to continue their flight to Copenhagen.

Losing their way over France and Spain, Hillig and Hoirlis flew until their gasoline supply was almost exhausted, coming down at Krefeld at 12:30 p. m. Boston time, 32 hours and six minutes after taking off from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland.

VOYAGE RESUMED

At 1:45 p. m. the fliers started off again, determined to reach Copenhagen, about 500 miles, in the quickest possible time.

Missing 25 Days

Laconia, N. H., June 25—The mystery of Lake Winnipesaukee grew deeper today with the finding of Chelso Arrigoni's body almost near the spot where he disappeared from a speedboat 25 days ago.

The find was a signal for a hurried gathering here of New Hampshire's legal and medical officials in the hopes that they could pierce the veil of mystery around the death of the former Connecticut State Senator, prosperous business man and graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

It at least cleared the mystery of Arrigoni's whereabouts that ended a search since May 31, when he vanished from the speed boat that also carried Miss Catherine Hance of Red Bank, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. George Billings of Long Island, N. Y.

But Arrigoni's manner of death still remained a mystery.

Clad in gray trousers, sport shoes and a red sweater, the body was sighted by a towboat crew between Meredith Neck and Bear Island, almost at the spot he disappeared.

BODY FOUND FLOATING

The sweater was loaned Arrigoni by Gardiner Greene, former Harvard baseball pitcher and wealthy resident of The Weirs and Boston.

The body was floating head and feet down with only the small of the back above the surface. Arrigoni's gold rimmed spectacles were still on.

Capt. William Raymond of the Chase & Beazey towboat sighted it while thee raft was on an exploring morning, trip with logs in that vicinity.

It was hauled aboard and taken to Irwin's pier to await examination by the coroner. Sheriff Fred Elliott, State's Atty. Ralph Davis and Detective James R. Wood of Boston, all of whom worked on the case, were also notified.

Medical Referee L. R. Brown ordered the body moved to a Laconia funeral home where the autopsy will be performed.

Atty. Davis summoned Dr. Howard N. Kingsford of Dartmouth College, state pathologist, and Dr.

STOCKS REACT AFTER RISING

New York, June 25 (AP)—A heavy volume of profit-taking followed another active advance of $1 to $7 in the stock market today and most prominent issues closed with net losses of $1 to $2.

United States Steel common turned a rise of $2 into a decline of $1.90. Its high for the day was 102. American Can, Bethlehem Steel, American Telephone, New York Central, Radio, Sears Roebuck, General Electric and General Motors lost in the neighborhood of a dollar each. American Tobacco "B" dropped $2.

Anaconda, which had featured a sharp upturn in the coppers, held $1 of an extreme jump of $3. Auburn Auto sprinted $23.50, again crossing $200, but cut its gain in two.

J. I. Case also gave the shorts a squeezing with a jump of 6.75, most of which was surrendered.

ROBBER GETS 77 TO 120 YEARS

Sentence of 77 to 120 years in State prison was given 18-year-old Joseph Romanovitz of Second st., Everett, by Judge John M. Gibbs in Middlesex Superior Court at East Cambridge today after the boy was speedily convicted of armed robbery and assault with intent to murder.

The sentence is a record in this State, according to prison officials.

Displaying no emotion when sentenced, the boy remarked to the court officers who led him from the room:

"Keep a watch on me because I'll make a break if I possibly can. "I'll never serve this."

Romanovitz was given 25 to 40 years for armed robbery in Malden December 20, 1930, and 25 to 40 years for an Everett holdup a short time later. He was given 12 to 30 years for armed robbery of Thomas L. Killion, Malden court probation officer, and 15 to 20 years for assault with intent to murder Killion.

Romanivitz and another youth escaped from Malden District Court by felling Killion with a bar of lead wrenched from a settee. The other youth has not been recaptured.

Romanovitz was captured Monday night. Today he went on trial. Within four hours he was found guilty by a jury. Less than three full days after his recapture he was on his way to prison.

Nurse's Death Not Due to Force, Says Expert

By WIN BROOKS
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Newport, R. I., June 25—Through the testimony of two more medical experts, Elliott R. Hathaway, on trial for throttling Verne E. Russell, today battled to convince 12 jurymen that the Fall River nurse strangled on her own teeth.

The witnesses were Dr. Thomas A. Gonzales, acting chief medical examiner of New York, and Dr. Francis P. McCarthy, Tufts College professor and former assistant medical examiner of Boston.

DIED IN SPASM

Although he admitted that from the medical signs contained in a 4000-word hypothetical question he could not state the cause of asphyxia in the present case, Dr. Gonzales, who has made a special study of manual strangulation, cited cardinal symptoms of throttling that did not appear in the question.

Dr. McCarthy, answering the hypothetical question, which required 23 minutes to read, said that in his opinion the victim died of asphyxia due to the presence of a foreign body producing a spasm and asphyxia.

He added, in his answer, "and not due to manual strangulation," but the phrase was ordered stricken from the record.

After Dr. Gonzales had testified to his opinion that asphyxia was the cause of death, defense counsel for the Fall River playboy fought in vain to get his opinion as to whether manual strangulation was the cause of the asphyxia.

STIMSON TO JOIN MELLON IN PARIS DEBT DISCUSSIONS

SECRETARY TO SEEK ACTION BY FRENCH

Germans Are Asked to Paris Session Next Week as Mellon Arrives

BULLETINS

Paris, June 25 (INS)—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Foreign Minister Dr. Julius Curtius of Germany have been invited by the French government to come to Paris on Tuesday for a conference, it was officially announced this afternoon.

Washington, June 25 (AP)—Secretary of State Stimson arranged today to sail for Europe to participate in the final negotiations for a one-year suspension of international war debts.

Stimson will sail Saturday on the Conte Grande for Naples.

ALL QUIET, WAITING

Meantime, Secretary Mellon was changing his "vacation" headquarters from London to Paris and a tight-lipped silence fell upon Washington officialdom regarding the progress of plans for carrying out the moratorium.

The reply of France to the President's proposal was being studied by Mr. Hoover and Secretary Stimson, but the details of the supposed counter-proposal of that country were not disclosed.

PLAN GERMAN LOAN

Another proposal designed to relieve Germany by the grant of a short term credit loan of $100,000,000 to the Reichsbank to tide it over to the end of the month was before Federal Reserve and Treasury officials. These negotiations included also the Bank of England, the Bank of France and the bank for International Settlements at Basle.

FOR GOOD FAITH

The credit movement is supplementary to the Hoover debt plan and was regarded in some official circles as a step not only necessary to promote European economic stability, but also as a further evidence of good faith and a sincere effort to remedy the German credit situation.

The announcement of Secretary Stimson that he would go ahead at this time with his plans for a trip to Europe was taken by some State Department officials as an indication that the negotiations were proceeding favorably.

So far the situation is as follows:

Germany accepted the proposal gratefully and unconditionally.

Great Britain approved it in spirit, as well as in letter.

Italy endorsed it cordially and completely, without "political reservations."

Austria approved unconditionally.

France submitted the counter-proposition.

Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Poland and Belgium are "sympathetic" but have made no official response.

After receiving the French answer, Secretary Stimson also said, "I am very optimistic," and added: "It would be a crime if anything happened."

Nevertheless, the general opinion was that the French proposal will be unacceptable unless it is so framed as not to conflict with the President's offer.

Mellon Reaches Paris; Conference Planned

Paris, June 25 (AP)—Andrew W. Mellon, American Secretary of the Treasury, arrived at Gare St. Lazare from London shortly before 6 o'clock tonight.

Mr. Mellon was met by Paul de Lagreze, representing Foreign Minister Briand, and Theodore Marrier, counselor of the American embassy, in behalf of Ambassador Edge.

Although Mr. Mellon has said he was coming for a pleasure trip to the capital and to Southern France, observers were inclined to connect his visit with the French reply to Washington yesterday.

It was believed Mr. Mellon would confer with Government officials and officers of the Bank of France concerning the French counter-proposal for aiding Germany.

REPLY IS FAVORED.

The substance of the Government's note, insisting that the Young plan be strictly observed through the continuance of German reparations, unconditional payments, generally gave satisfaction to all reports, and the commissions and lobbies of Parliament was that Premier Laval would be upheld in crucial debate on the subject in the Chamber of Deputies tomorrow.

CONFERENCE FAVORED

Chancellor Bruening's invitation for an informal Franco-German conference introduced a new element into the situation, but nothing was expected to be done in this until after tomorrow's debate. The idea was greeted enthusiastically by Left parties, but engendered some doubt elsewhere.

Mellon will have lunch tomorrow with Premier Laval at the ministry of the interior. It was expected that several Cabinet members, including Foreign Minister Briand and Finance Minister Flandin, will be present.

Charles Duncan of the New Hampshire board of health to assist in the examination of the body.

The effect of 25 days in the water showed plainly on the body, but an autopsy was ordered immediately in an effort to determine the cause of death.

MANY WERE QUESTIONED.

Since the disappearance a veil of mystery has hung over the case. It brought the questioning of many prominent members of the summer colony including Miss Hance, who at one time was named "Miss Lake Winnipesaukee."

Jack Delaney, former light heavyweight boxing champion; George Billings, a former boxer, and his wife and many other were questioned.

Blood stains on Billings' shirt front led to a suspicion of trouble, but that was dissolved when Delaney said he cut his hand on a broken windshield and gleefully used Billings' shirt for a towel.

A theory of suicide was advanced on a story of Miss Hance that Arrigoni said he made a bad bid on a road building contract and stood to lose money.

It was abandoned, however, when Arrigoni's father assured officials his son was financially independent. Additional life insurance shortly before his death was described as coincidence.

One line of questioning was concerning a reported argument Arrigoni engaged in before the fatal boat ride.

The boat had struck some rocks near the scene of the disappearance and many clung to the theory that Arrigoni was thrown overboard by the force of the impact.

FATHER NOTIFIED

This was scoffed at by others who cited his abilities as a swimmer, provided he had not been stunned by a fall.

He was alone in the rear seat, Miss Hance having left him a short time before the accident to occupy the front seat with the Billings couple.

Charles Arrigoni, cousin of Chelso, left Durham, Ct., with a family undertaker bound for Laconia when the family was notified of the find.

Frank Arrigoni, wealthy contractor and father of the dead man, was notified while on a business trip in upper New York State.

He has offered a reward of $10,000 for the finding of his son alive and $1000 by the finder of the body if he was found dead.

DIVERS HUNT IN VAIN.

The elder Arrigoni spent thousands of dollars in a search for his son.

Divers were engaged and searched the vicinity where the body floated to the surface today.

State police of Connecticut and private investigators were sent here when the father refused to believe his son had accidentally drowned or committed suicide.

Even clues to a mysterious "wild man" were run down on Timber Island on the theory that Arrigoni may have made the mile distance by swimming.

Firemen extinguished the blaze shortly after they reached the scene. No cause has been determined for the fire. Damages were set at $2500.

the police refused to reveal any names, they declared that there were poems included in the book dedicated in endearing terms to several men.

The book also threw a new light on Miss Edison's talents. The poems and other entries were illuminated by cleverly executed sketches, and from neighbors it was learned that she contemplated entering an art school in Boston this fall, to further an art education financed by Johnson.

The girl said she and Johnson, for whom she has kept house for seven months while a student in high school, returned from a ride about midnight. She retired directly to her room, she said, donned her pajamas and was seized from behind by the kidnapers.

"I struggled with them and broke away," she told police. "I stumbled through the door, fell down the stairs and ran to the home of Mrs. Norris."

Then in spite of the fact that Mr. Hearst speaks for a great mass of American public opinion, he is going into the fight a certain loser.

"When President Hoover uttered that fatal word 'moratorium,' he opened a door that can never be closed. It was nothing less than a reprieve for Germany based on the conviction that the executioner and the condemned would hang on the same rope if the war debts sentence was carried through.

"Mr. Hearst cannot reinvoke the sentence of death again were his voice ten times as powerful as it is."

HEARST ATTACK ON DEBT PLAN STIRS LONDON

British Foreign Office Silent as Leaders and Press Express Views

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
Universal Service Special Cable
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

London, June 25—Overshadowing the question of the French answer to President Hoover's proposed moratorium, London's sole pre-occupation today, officially and unofficially, was the blast against the Hoover policy published by William Randolph Hearst.

Although the Foreign Office maintained a discreet silence, refusing the least comment, members of Parliament and other government officials admitted that Mr. Hearst's pronouncements have injected a new and surprising element into the situation.

It may be truthfully said that English publicists who have gleefully declared that "President Hoover has opened a door which never can be closed," are stunned by Mr. Hearst's voicing his opinion that Americans will not be deceived by the Hoover moratorium but will construe it as the first step toward war debt cancellation.

An influential Liberal M. P. said: "Mr. Hearst is likely to kick over the applecart just when everything seems all set for America's logical consideration of the war debt question."

PAPERS COMMENT

The News-Chronicle, in reviewing Mr. Hearst's statement, stated editorially:

"The first fatal flaw in Mr. Hearst's theory is his assumption that if President Hoover had his things be, nothing would have happened and Germany would have gone on paying as usual.

"It is quite certain that Germany would not.

"Mr. Hearst simply evades the issue by pretending that default would not have followed speedily if the moratorium offer had not been made.

"Mr. Hearst's argument doubtless represents a certain naive and ill-informed section of American opinion which might, in certain circumstances, become powerful.

"To all whom it may concern—especially to France—that reflection is important."

DAILY EXPRESS' VIEWS

The Daily Express, commenting editorially on Mr. Hearst's statement, requested earlier by that paper and printed belatedly after the same statement appeared in the Hearst newspapers on Tuesday, declared:

"Most people in Great Britain will deplore the stand that Mr. William Randolph Hearst has taken on the question of President Hoover's war debts moratorium.

"Mr. Hearst is a powerful and courageous publicist. He does not wince nor cry aloud when he is attacked. He gives and takes hard blows.

"It is a pity, therefore, that he has decided to range himself with the forces of reaction. It means that President Hoover is going to have a grim fight to carry his project through.

Sen. Johnson Flays Debt Plan as Cancellation Move by Bankers

San Francisco, June 25—Assailing the administration's plan for a moratorium on all international debts as the "beginning of the cancellation of the debts owed the United States, Senator Hiram W. Johnson, Republican of California, issued the following statement here today:

Generally speaking, I am sympathetic with moratoriums, international, national or individual. How marvelous it would be if our banks would say to our people who are in the red, "We grant you a moratorium and we do it, in the language of the President, 'as wise creditors in our own interests and as good neighbors.'" I wonder if we could not with beautiful language soft and sweet, induce American financiers to take this attitude toward Americans.

The American people are asked immediately to consent to, and the Congress by wire, to legislate a moratorium for Europe from solemn agreements settling Europe's debts to the United States. Perhaps this should be done, but Americans are entitled to know exactly the situation and the Congress hardly fulfills its functions when stampeded without full knowledge into a telegraphic 'yes'.

What is proposed? The President says "the American Government postponement

Sen. Johnson

pone their principal of interest to collecting their high rates of interest we might in suppliant fashion suggest it.

The administration's papers in San Francisco state "American financiers, with more than $1,000,000,000 of investments in Germany, acquired chiefly since 1924, have been strongly influential at the trend of affairs in Germany."

Ostensibly the moratorium is to aid Germany, but the beneficiaries who profit most will be the American financiers with more than a billion dollars at stake.

A moratorium for one year, just a brief pause, is planned. In reality, it is the beginning of the cancellation of the debts due to the United States from European nations, debts due not alone for moneys advanced during the war, but for moneys loaned European nations after the war for rehabilitation.

We buy from the European nations, it is claimed, forbearance for Germany, but what we are actually doing is to safeguard loans and investments of our international bankers.

Anyone with the slightest knowledge of the propaganda of the last year for the cancellation of foreign debts knows that moratorium means cancellation. When the President's offer was cabled to Europe, the European press, the home of the League of Nations, predicted the payment of the debts, even suspended, probably never would be resumed. This indeed is the accepted foreign view.

The Scripps-Howard newspapers accurately state the fact in their editorials of approval when the moratorium when they say to the American people they need not take seriously Mr. Hoover's statement, "I do not approve in any remote sense the cancellation of debts due to us," and this powerful string of newspapers points out that the debts will probably be cancelled.

We may take it that this is the fact and it is quite paradoxical to advocate a moratorium and then assert that we are opposed to cancellation.

I repeat, perhaps this moratorium should be granted, while we stand helpless to aid our own. If Germany faces utter economic ruin, we would like to help without injustice to our own. But we would like to be certain the aid we extend helps those intended to be helped.

We are absolutely without the facts upon which to base a considered judgment. The moratorium is shouted by the international press and all the "yes" men of the country as the greatest event since the World War, of "stupendous" and "unparalleled" character.

Every internationalist is engaged in bludgeoning the rest of our people into acquiescence. This country is still a republic, governed presumably by the representatives of the people. If nonfronting us now is a question of "unparalled importance," the "most stupendous event since the World War," the representatives of the people should be called together to act upon it, with full knowledge of every detail concerning it. And beyond that the American people are entitled to know every fact and circumstance which induced the action of the administration.

Here's a policy which places an added burden in these terrible times of two hundred million dollars more upon an already overburdened American people, and which may possibly, indeed probably, deprive them in the future of many billions of dollars to which they are justly entitled.

Such a policy, after long preparation, is sprung upon them overnight. It is sought to sweep them off their feet to immediate acquiescence and their representatives are expected from the far corners of the country at once to agree. Let the Congress meet and turn on the light.

La Follette for Plan; Against Cancellation

Madison, Wis., June 25 (AP)—Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin today informed President Hoover he would support the proposed one-year moratorium. He said the matter should be dealt with at a special session of Congress. He did not consider the proposal as a satisfactory wedge for debt cancellation, adding:

"I shall continue to oppose such cancellation unless it shall be accompanied by definite agreements for revision downward of reparations, a drastic and genuine land and naval armament reduction to relieve taxpayers of the largest single item in their crushing burden in all countries."

JURORS SCORE STATE PRISON

State Prison is condemned in its entirety and in every part, and conditions at Deer Island House of Correction are denounced in many particulars, in a report to Judge Harold P. Williams of the Superior Court by the Suffolk County grand jury.

The report of the jurors on conditions at State Prison corroborate in full the exposures made early this year by the Boston Evening American.

Recommendation is made by the grand jury for a legislative appropriation to start a new State prison immediately. Various ways of improving conditions at Deer Island with city of Boston funds are also pointed out.

The grand jury inspected three state prison colony, the Concord reformatory and the Charles street jail—and commended conditions at these places, praising Supt. Gill of Norfolk and Sheriff John A. Kelley, who has charge of the jail.

FIND NOTHING TO PRAISE

Of State prison, their report says in part:

"We found practically nothing that we could commend, but on the contrary everything that should be condemned.

"The buildings are very old, the cell block building where the inmates are confined is not a fit place to confine any human being.

"The cells are extremely small and the sanitary equipment is a relic from the 18th century, insanitary and in our opinion dangerous to the health of the inmates.

"The prison is very much overcrowded, so much so that a large percentage of the inmates are compelled to sleep in the corridors and other parts of the different buildings.

"The workrooms are in our opinion unsafe fire traps, built in the very cheapest manner and so flimsy and worn out that it is dangerous to require men to work in them. The kitchen arrangements and the method of feeding the inmates are a disgrace.

YACHT OF RICH BOSTON MAN NEW CLUE IN STARR'S DEATH

HER SISTER AND MOTHER PUT ON GRILL

By JOHN H. NOONAN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent.

Mineola, L. I., June 25—The private yacht of a wealthy Boston man was disclosed today to have been in this vicinity on or about the time Starr Faithfull disappeared to be found dead three days later on Long Beach.

Two detectives were assigned to check this information and other values connected therewith, the Boston Evening American learned, although Inspector Harold King said they were "just going out to search the beach again."

The yacht is reported to have been in New York harbor on June 8, the day the girl vanished, and at Long Island points for two weeks previous.

While this unexpected angle of the mystery was developing, the Nassau County authorities were still rounding up information about Starr's whereabouts and companions during the last 72 hours of her life.

Elizabeth Tucker Faithfull, sister of the dead beauty, and her brother were questioned by officials today, but Stanley Faithfull, the stepfather, was not present. Last night all three were questioned at great length.

LEAVES HOUSE ALONE

Later today Tucker, as the sister calls herself, emerged from the Faithfull home on St. Luke's pl. in Greenwich Village, and started uptown alone. During the whole investigation she has only once before left the house without her stepfather.

Tomorrow the Nassau County grand jury will reconvene and will hear testimony from handwriting experts. Two experts have already stated the so-called "suicide letters" to Dr. G. Jameson-Carr, Cunard

DRIVEN TO ACT BY 'CAMPAIGN OF TERROR'

Considerable Mystery Surrounds Reports of Titian-Haired Beauty's Death Try

Berlin, June 25 (INS)—A "campaign of terror" against Mme. Magda Lupescu, titian-haired sweetheart of King Carol of Rumania, culminating in an alleged suicide attempt, was reported today in dispatches reaching here from Bucharest.

Considerable mystery surrounded the incident. A message to the Berlin newspaper Lokal-Anzeiger reported a definite attempt at suicide, while other dispatches merely stated the beautiful Rumanian divorcee who lived with Carol for five years in exile, had taken an "overdose" of veronal.

SEEKS TO END LIFE

Immediately preceding the incident, however, some of Mme. Lupescu's enemies in Bucharest were said to have launched upon a campaign of terrorization with the avowed object of enforcing her speedy departure from Bucharest.

Whether their attempt was successful was problematical.

Some reports said the alleged suicide attempt took place 10 days ago and that Mme. Lupescu left soon after her recovery for Paris. Others stated she was still in Bucharest, residing in a villa furnished by King Carol, while semi-official sources persisted in their declaration Mme. Lupescu had not been in Rumania since Carol's seizure of the throne.

RUMORS ARE SPREAD.

In an effort to intimidate Mme. Lupescu, the reports declared, her enemies spread wild rumors of a contemplated military plot against the regime of King Carol.

To excite fear in the heart of the red-haired charmer, the rumormongers were said to have informed Mme. Lupescu that the plotters planned a fate for her and King Carol similar to that which befell King Alexander and Queen Draga of Serbia in 1903.

VICE PROBE TO BE CITY WIDE

Leo Schwartz, legal advisor to Police Commissioner Hultman, who is conducting a probe into liquor and vice conditions in the Back Bay, today indicated that the probe was city-wide.

While no appointments to interview patrolmen had been made for today, Schwartz stated that it was probable many other members of the department would be questioned.

Asked if the probe was a forerunner for a police shake-up, Schwartz said such a happening was unlikely. The probe is being made simply to compile evidence for civil cases against disorderly houses.

Officers from two stations were questioned yesterday in addition to Capt. Jeremiah Mosher and five men from the Back Bay station. Schwartz declined to give the names of the men of the two other stations.

A request from Capt. Mosher for the transfer of several men from his division was denied by Commissioner Hultman.

From an official source it was learned that 75 places under suspicion in the city were being investigated.

Three families, including 14 children, were driven to the street by a blaze in the three-story wooden building at 638-644 Cambridge st., East Cambridge, early today. State and Cambridge officials are investigating.

YOUTH MARRIED ON STOLEN CASH

An urge for marital life after two days' courtship brought a Lynn youth into Lynn court today, charged with larceny of three vacuum cleaners.

Charles W. Savory, 18, the young bridegroom, told police he sold the cleaners for his firm, but needed the money to get married on. He lives at 122 Essex st., Lynn.

While the anxious young bride looked wonderingly around the court room, Savory was given a six months' suspended sentence and an order to pay $25 in court costs.

The latter was the expense incurred in recovery of two of the cleanups.

Judge Edward O'Brien gave Savory a few days to produce the third cleaner or pay $75 more.

The couple left the courtroom arm in arm.

Savory told the court he met his bride a week ago, married her two days later and used the cash with the intention of some day returning it to his employers.

The resolution informed the commission that "all steam railroads in the United States are prepared, if the authority sought in the application is granted, to make effective increases of all existing freight rates and charges * * * with such adjustments in the case of coal, coke and certain other commodities as will preserve existing differentials."

"It is not proposed to make any specific exception on any commodities," read the resolution, "and the carriers are prepared to make increases in all rates on grain and grain products, including live stock, non-ferrous metals, iron and steel products, petroleum and its products, lumber and automobiles and in all existing class rates."

GRAND HOTEL THE SENSATION OF EUROPE AND AMERICA By VICKI BAUM

What Trick Has Fate for the Baron and the Lovely Actress Grusinskaya?

THE HALL porter was a little white about the gills as he came out of No. 7 box. He went for his cap, which he had left on the radiator.

"What was it?" asked the operator at the switchboard, earphones over his head and the red and green stops between his fingers.

"They've taken my wife to the hospital all of a sudden. I don't know at all what that means. She says it's beginning. But, good heavens! it can't have got that far."

The operator was only half listening. He had a call to put through. "Well, don't worry, Herr Senf," he said. "You'll have a fine boy first thing in the morning——"

"Thank you, anyway, for calling me to the phone here. I can't go shouting about my private affairs over there at my desk. Duty is duty.

"Just so. And when the baby's there I'll ring through," said the operator absentmindedly, and carried on with his calls. The porter took his cap and went off on tip-toe. He did this unconsciously because his wife had been brought to bed and was about to have a child. As he crossed the passage, where the silent reading and writing rooms had half their lights switched off, he let out a deep breath and ran his fingers through his hair. He was surprised to find them wet, but there was no time to wash his hands. After all, the routine of the hotel could not be upset because Hall Porter Senf's wife was expecting a baby.

SEVEN O'CLOCK POST

The music from the tea room in the new building beat in agreeable fashion from mirror to mirror along the walls. It was dinner time and a smell of cooking was in the air, but behind the closed doors of the large dining room there was still silence and vacancy. The chief, Mattoni, was setting out his cold buffet in the small white room. The porter felt a strange weakness in his knees and he stopped a moment in the doorway, arrested by the bright gleams of the colored lights behind the blocks of ice.

In the corridor an electrician was kneeling on the floor, buried over some repair to the wires. Ever since they had had those powerful lights to illuminate the hotel frontage there had always been something going wrong with the overworked installation of the hotel. The porter pulled himself together and went back to his post.

Little Georgi meanwhile had taken charge. Georgi was the son of the proprietor of a large hotel business who wanted to see his son work his way up from the bottom. Senf, feeling himself oppressed, made his way straight across the lounge, where there was now a throng of movement. Here the jazz band from the tea room encountered the vicuna from the Winter Garden, while mingled with them came the thin murmur of the illuminated fountain as it fell into its imitation Venetian basin, the ring of glasses on tables, the creaking of wicker chairs, and lastly, a soft rustle of the furs and silks in which women were moving to and fro. A cool March air came in gusts through the revolving doors whenever the page boy passed guests in or out.

"All right," said little Georgi in English as Senf finally dropped anchor at the porter's desk, "Sixty-eight has been making a row because her chauffeur wasn't there on the tick. Rather a hysterical lady, eh?"

"Sixty-eight — that's Grusinskaya," said the hall porter, and began to sort the letters with his right hand. "That's the dancer. We know her—for 18 years past. She gets a fit of nerves every night before she goes on the stage, and then she makes a row."

A tall gentleman in the lounge got up stiffly out of an easy chair and came with bent head toward the porter's desk.

LOITERED AWHILE.

He loitered for a bit round the lounge before approaching the entrance hall. The impression he made was emphatically one of listlessness and boredom as he glanced at the magazines displayed on the little bookstall and lit a cigarette. Finally, however, he fetched up beside the porter and asked casually, "Any letters for me?"

The porter knew his cue in this little comedy. He looked in pigeon-hole No. 218 before he replied: "Not this time, Herr Doktor." Whereupon the tall gentleman slowly set himself in motion again. After coasting round to his chair he sank down into it stiff-legged, and then stared blindly out into the lounge. His face, it must be said, consisted of one half only, in which the sharp and ascetic profile of a Jesuit was completed by an unusually well-shaped ear beneath the sparse gray hair on his temples. The other half of his face was not there. In place of it was a confusedly medley of seams and scars, crossing and overlapping, and among them was set a glass eye.

"A souvenir from Flanders," Dr. Otternschlag was accustomed to call it when talking to himself.

He sat there for a while surveying the gilded stucco capitals of the marble pillars, a sight he was heartily sick of, and staring his fill with unseeing eyes into the lounge, which was now emptying fairly quickly as the theatres opened. Then he got up once more and stumped across with his marionette gait to the porter's desk, where Herr Senf, putting aside his private affairs, was now officiating with zeal.

"No one asked for me?" Dr. Otternschlag inquired as he glanced at the glazed mahogany board where the porter pasted notes and messages.

"No one, Herr Doktor."

"Telegrams?" asked Dr. Otternschlag after a moment. Herr Senf obligingly looked once more in pigeon hole 218, though he knew very well there was nothing in it.

"Not today, Herr Doktor," and added, with a touch of human kindness, "Perhaps Herr Doktor would like to go to the theatre. I have a stall for Grusinskaya—at the Theatre des Westens."

"Grusinskaya? No thanks!" said Dr. Otternschlag and, wandered off through the entrance hall and back around the lounge to his chair. So Grusinskaya doesn't sell out any more, he thought meanwhile. Not surprised. Know I'll never go to see her again. He settled down miserably in his chair.

NOT A LETTER

"That man's enough to drive one silly," said the porter to little Georgi. "Everlastingly asking for letters. Every year for 18 years he's spent a month or two here, and not a letter has he ever had and not even a dog has ever asked for him. And there he sits about just the same and waits—"

"Who's waiting?" asked Rohna, the head reception clerk, from the bureau near by, sticking up his bright red head over the low glass partition. But the porter did not reply. He thought he had just heard his wife cry out and he strained his ears. Then he had to dismiss his private cares again, and help little Georgi unravel some complicated train connection in Spanish for the Mexican gentleman in room No. 117. Page boy No. 24, with red cheeks and well-plastered hair, shot across from the lift and called out excitedly —too loud for the dignity of the lounge—"Baron Gaigern's chauffeur!"

Rohna raised an admonitory and reprasive hand like a conductor. The porter passed on the order for the chauffeur by telephone. Georgi opened eyes of boyish expectation. There was a smell of lavende and expensive cigarettes, immediately followed by a man whose appearance was so striking that many heads were turned to look at him. He was unusually tall and extremely well dressed and his step was as elastic as a cat's or a tennis champion's. He wore a dark blue trench coat over his dinner jacket and this was scarcely correct perhaps, but it gave an attractive negligent air to his appearance.

LOUNGE EMPTY

It was Grusinskaya, a small, slim figure in a fur coat, followed by a vague and self-effacing being with two cases in her hands.

When the commissionaire at the entrance had slowed these two in their car the engaging gentleman in the blue trenchcoat lit his cigarette, put his hand in his pocket for a coin to give page boy No. 11, who was working the revolving door, and disappeared through its whirling of reflected lights with the blissful air of a young fellow going out on a spree.

As soon as this charming Baron Gaigern had forsaken the lounge it suddenly became still, and the illuminated fountain could be heard falling into its Venetian basin with a cool and gentle murmur. The reason was that the lounge was now empty, as jazz band in the tea room had stopped, the music in the dining room had not begun, and the Viennese Trio in the Winter Garden was having a pause. The sudden stillness was broken only by the agitated and persistent hooting of cars as they passed the hotel entrance and were lost again in the night life of the town. Within, however, the lounge was as still as if Baron Gaigern had taken the music, the noise, and the murmur of voices away with him.

The hall porter shrugged his shoulders with the air of a man who knows his fellow-man. "Whether he's all right remains to be seen. He's a bit—I don't know. He's too much of the fine fellow for me. The side he puts on and the tips he gives. It seems a bit queer to me. And whoever travels nowadays to throw his money about, unless he's a swindler? If I were Pilzheim I'd keep my eyes open."

Rohna, the head reception clerk, whose ears were always on the alert, looked up again over the glass partition. The blue-white skin of his head gleamed beneath his thin, reddish hair. "That will do, Senf," he said. "Gaigern's all right, I know him. He was at school with my brother at Feldkirch. There's no need to put Pilzheim on to him."

"Does going to school with a chap make him all right?" asked Pilzheim, the house detective, who had sauntered over and heard the last of this conversation.

"Not necessarily," Pilzheim answered his own question.

"Senf has been clever at sizing up people here. I am inclined to agree with him," the astute house detective went on. "This Gaigern will bear watching. I know something about him."

The house detective is right. Read every instalment of this world-famous story and learn the amazing and tragic roles this Baron Gaigern plays, for he, like the others, is but a puppet in the grip of Fate.

Dr. Otternschlag wandered off . . . as the baron removed his hat and stood aside to allow two ladies to pass before him through the revolving door. It was Grusinskaya, a small slim figure, followed by a vague and self-effacing being with two cases in her hands.

WIFE 'HIGH HAT,' SAYS MANVILLE

New York, June 25 (AP)—Newspapers today said that Thomas Franklin Manville, Jr., son of the asbestos manufacturer, would seek a divorce from his bride of one month, the former Avonne Taylor, show girl.

Manville, the papers say, sought his attorney, Mark Eisner, yesterday for advice about either a Mexican or Reno divorce.

Friends of Manville said his feelings were hurt because of his wife's attitude described as being too "high hat."

Mrs. Manville told newspapermen her husband kicked out of their Hotel Pierre suits. She was quoted as saying:

"He has done it before and had come back and said he was sorry."

The marriage of the couple on May 31 was the third for each.

...e ship's surgeon, were not writ... by Starr.

Another surprise disclosure today was that a witness has been found who saw Starr with two young men at Fifth ave. and Seventh st., Manhattan, on the afternoon of her disappearance, and that the same witness saw the men the following Sunday at Long Beach. The body was found early the next morning.

Dist.-Atty. Edwards announced that Starr's diary, with which the handwriting in the letters is being compared, will be burned by him when the investigation is ended, in accordance with a promise made to her family.

STATEMENT TOMORROW

Edwards has already intimated that he will issue a statement in connection with the dead girl's last party after the hearing tomorrow.

Edwards pointed out yesterday that the letters were not sufficient to close the investigation. Certain other points must be explained, he said. He then expressed the belief that at the end of tomorrow's hearing he would have enough information to make a complete statement.

Asst. Dist.-Atty. Littleton and Inspector Harold B. King likewise stated that the case was still open, so far as they were concerned.

It was learned that officials were engaged in a renewed search for the wealthy man with whom a taxi driver saw Starr on the day of her disappearance.

Several detectives, were busy checking with Harry Goldstein, the chauffeur held on a Los Angeles larceny and wife-desertion charge, the story of driving Starr and a man on an eight-day tour through France and Germany in 1928 and of seeing them together near the Grand Central station on June 6.

It was learned that Dr. Carr, Circuit ship surgeon, may be called before the grand jury for additional testimony tomorrow.

The girl's stepfather displayed great bitterness toward Dr Carr yesterday, declaring he had made many misstatements concerning his acquaintance with Starr.

WRITING DIFFERENT

He also offered his reasons for believing the notes to Dr. Carr to be forged.

"The phraseology, salutation, handwriting and signature are very obviously not Starr's," he said. "She would never have used the expression 'hello, Bill, old thing.' She respected Dr. Carr too highly for that.

"I have received a great many letters from Starr and have enalled many for her. It was her custom to say 'via' some host or other and not 'by', as one of the letters is addressed. Apparently as they have at this time, the letters fit perfectly with the theory that I originally gave to the authorities."

He said only one letter, the first, resembled Starr's handwriting in any way and that only slightly.

DEATH CAUSE UNKNOWN TO EXPERT

that his answer that he was unable to state the cause of the asphyxia precluded the question and it remained unanswered.

Dr. James Hamilton of Providence, the first defense medical expert, testified yesterday on the basis of the same hypothetical question put to Dr. Gonzales today that he believed accidental strangulation the cause of asphyxia.

Under cross-examination by Atty.-Gen. Benjamin McLyman, Dr. Gonzales was asked:

"You wouldn't expect any medical examiner, even a man of your wide and varied experience to determine the cause of the asphyxia from the signs in the hypothetical question."

"Not without seeing the body," the famous pathologist, who has made a study of manual strangulation, answered.

COURT CROWDED

So far as it appears in evidence, Dr. Hamilton, who formed the opinion that Verna died of accidental strangulation, did not see the body.

Cool and smiling, smoking a cigarette, Hathaway was brought to court nearly an hour before his trial resumed in its 15th day.

His entire family again was present, Mrs. Hathaway, who yesterday suffered a partial collapse from the strain of consistent attendance at the trial, appeared in better health.

The hypothetical question read at the close of yesterday's session was not repeated. Dr. Gonzales was asked whether from the medical signs indicated in the question he could give an opinion as to the cause of death of the victim.

QUESTION BLOCKED

"Asphyxia," he replied. And went on to state that he could not say what caused the asphyxia.

The defense efforts to gain his opinion as to whether throttling caused death resulted in constant objections.

Once Judge Walsh said: "The witness has not seen the subject, the witness has not examined the body."

George Hurley, defense chief, asked Dr. Gonzales to assume in addition to the signs in the hypothetical question that the two-tooth bridge was in the victim's larynx.

"Can you then form an opinion?"

A sustained objection brought from Judge Walsh the comment that "there is no evidence showing that it was ever in the larynx."

Hurley asked for a chance to argue and the court replied.

"Mr. Hurley, I've ruled."

Once McLyman accused defense counsel of asking a question just for the purpose of getting an objection.

Dr. Gonzales testified that in cases of manual strangulation there are often injuries to the face, lips, hands, arms, lower limbs of the victim with abrasions and contusions, and in some cases the finger nails are torn from the bed.

"A young and healthy individual not rendered unconscious by a blow or stupefied may struggle violently to get free," he said, injuring not only his or herself but the assailant."

Once Hurley asked whether the marks on the neck of the deceased were insufficient to warrant a diagnosis on manual strangulation and Judge Walsh, ruling the question out, said: "There is no evidence to warrant such an assumption."

FIGHT FIGURES

Under cross-examination Dr. Gonzales said the petechial hemorrhages and the marks on the neck were consistent with manual strangulation.

He admitted further that he had never seen any contusions from a person grasping his or her own throat while strangling on a foreign object but that he had seen fingernail marks.

It was possible a blow on the face, strong enough to knock out two teeth, would reduce resistance of a victim so that there would appear no signs of struggle, he said, but he would expect to find evidence on the lips of such a blow being struck.

He said he believed a 20-year-old girl, being throttled, would put up "a pretty good fight."

Dr. McCarthy, under direct examination, testified he had with him a model construction of the throat. He was asked to produce it and Judge Walsh ordered the jury from the room. When the jurors returned testimony resumed.

He was permitted to answer the question relating to the possibility of a foreign body being expelled from the larynx despite the objection of Asst. Atty.-Gen. Edward Day, who said:

"The defendant has told his version of what occurred and there is not one iota of evidence of any foreign body having been in the throat while the girl was alive.

"If a foreign body is small it may produce a spasm that would out of the air," Dr. McCarthy said.

He testified facing the jury and upon complaint of prosecution counsel that they could not hear him, court said: "Kindly talk to the attorney general's table."

PROPAGANDA IN SCHOOLS SHOWN

Washington, June 25 (AP)—Evidence showing the extent of distribution of electricity and gas propaganda material to schools and newspapers in various parts of the country was introduced today in the Federal Trade Commission's public utility inquiry.

A chart showing that in 1927 in Ohio 136,000 "electricity and gas pamphlets" were distributed to schools was introduced by William T. Chantland, assistant to the chief counsel in charge of the investigation.

Illinois and New York were next in line with 125,000 and 114,195, respectively, for the same year. The total for New England, exclusive of Connecticut, was 165,000.

Reports of State public utility information committees and bureaus were quoted to show that a large percentage of their material sent to newspapers was accepted and published or was "reflected in the editorial columns."

In Connecticut in 1926 the amount of the committee's material printed in every newspaper to which it was sent was said to average "about 6½ points on the subject.

scheduled arrival caused grave fears to be felt for their safety.

HILLIG'S OWN STORY

Hillig revealed to International News Service that both he and Hoirin had lost their bearings completely.

"It was hours ago when we came in from the sea," Hillig said. "We keps on until our fuel was nearly gone, and then found we had to come down without reaching Copenhagen in a single hope as we had planned to do.

"We thought we were over Spain when we decided to land. We were very much surprised then we swooped low over Krefeld and saw that we were in a German city."

Gloom Turned to Joy in Copenhagen

Copenhagen, June 25—Gloom was changed to joy this afternoon when word was received that the Liberty plane of Otto Hillig and Holger Hoirin had landed in Germany, refueled and taken off to conclude their transatlantic flight to the Danish capital. Earlier in the day it had been feared the fliers had met with some accident.

The mother of Hoirin said:

"I realize my son is running a great risk. I have armed myself against all possibilities so that my joy will be so much greater when he does arrive."

Momentary excitement was caused by reports from Helgoland and Jutland that planes had been seen there, but investigation revealed these ships probably came from a German airdrome near the border.

A. Hoirin, a relative, said that Holger told him when he left Denmark eight years ago:

"If I return I shall make you sit up."

Frank E. Briggs of Liberty, N. Y., a friend of Hillig, said Hillig promised:

"Either we will come direct to Copenhagen or not at all."

Leading meteorologists and aviators said the Liberty had missed by 24 hours the finest weather conditions over the Atlantic for a long time. They assumed that the fliers must have met with unfavorable elements.

Post and Gatty Land in Moscow From Berlin

Moscow, June 25 (AP)—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, American transatlantic fliers, landed at Octobar Airdrome this afternoon, completing approximately one-third of their rapid-fire flight around the world which they hope to complete in 10 days.

They were officially welcomed by officers of the Soviet Society for the Development of Aviation and the Civil Organization for the Promotion of Aviation.

Outside of airfield attaches and correspondents, there were few other spectators on hand to greet them. The foreign office was not represented.

When the fliers set their plane down on October Airfield on the outskirts of Moscow they had flown more than 5000 miles and still had between 9000 and 10,000 miles to go, including a flight across Siberia to Alaska.

LONG HOP TOMORROW

Post and Gatty will spend the night in Moscow and will hop off tomorrow for Irkutsk, 2600 miles distant.

A banquet has been arranged for them at the Grand Hotel tonight by the Soviet Society for the Development of Aviation.

The fliers made the 950-mile hop from Berlin to Moscow in slightly less than nine hours. They took off from Tempelhof Airdrome, Berlin, at 2:38 a. m. [illegible] landed here at 11:30 Boston daylight saving time. They had had good night's sleep in Berlin after a rousing reception that showed the Germans bear them no ill-will for their attempt to wrest the blue ribbon of round-the-world travel from Dr. Hugo Eckener, who set up a record of 21 days 17 minutes in the Graf Zeppelin.

The plane had been refueled and inspected and all Atlantis pronounced it in excellent condition for the flight against the record of Dr. Hugo Eckener's round-the-world mark of 21 days 17 minutes. Just before the take-off Post and Gatty expressed their gratitude for the night's rousing reception and other attentions paid them by well-wishers. Asked how they liked the welcome, they said, "Fine—but it was just a little crowded." They felt better when only a small gathering appeared to see them off.

To be sure they wouldn't go hungry, they had two breakfasts—a German one of coffee and rolls and an American one of ham and eggs.

FLY OVER POLAND

The fliers selected maps of eastern Europe from the Lufthansa store to guard against losing their way, as they did yesterday after landing in England. They set their course on a direct route across middle Poland instead of the more northerly route via Koenigsberg used by Lufthansa planes.

The Winnie Mae was supplied with 200 gallons of gasoline, sufficient to take her to Moscow, but 300 gallons more were stored at Kovno, Lithuania, in case of emergency.

Gatty's Wife Recalls Trying Hours of 1930

Los Angeles, June 25 (AP)—Mrs. Harold Gatty has found more time to consider the welfare of her husband on his round-the-world flight in the Winnie Mae than during his first venture in aerial navigation.

Mrs. Gatty told last night of trying hours she spent when her husband, with Harold Bromley, attempted a transpacific flight in September, 1930. Gatty had quit sea navigation for the air. Mrs. Gatty said:

"Alan had pneumonia and Ronald was sick, too, so I didn't have time to worry much. I had a regular hospital here when Harold came home. He was still suffering from the gas fumes, which came from the leak that forced their return to Japan. I sure was glad when they got back there."

Gatty was born at Campbelltown, Tasmania, Australia, Jan. 5, 1903. Mrs. Gatty is also a naturalized citizen from Australia. They came to Los Angeles in 1927.

Gatty was master of a private yacht here before he took up air navigation.

Mrs. Gatty and the three sons—Alan 6, Ronald 2, and Lindsay 3—have been in an airplane.

Friends in U. S. Rejoice Over Liberty's Flight

New York, June 25 (AP)—Forced landing of Otto Hillig and Holger Hoirin in Germany ended hours of anxiety for their friends in this country, and the word that they were unhurt was hailed with rejoicing at the flying fields.

Hillig and Hoirin had announced before leaving that the expected the flight to take 28 hours, and mentioned that this gave them a four-hour margin of safety, as they had fuel enough to stay in the air about 32 hours.

But when the 28 hour mark passed without word those who knew them at home and their many comrades of the air began to experience anxiety. This feeling steadily intensified as time passed and at last there came the hour when it was felt the fliers' fuel must have been exhausted.

Heads were shaken and there were gloomy recollections of the numerous flights which have ended in disaster during the years gone by.

And then came news that Hillig and Hoirin were safe and made everyone happy.

Hillig and Gatty Travel Light; Neither Has Hat

Oklahoma City, June 25 (AP)—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty are traveling light.

Two handkerchiefs, a change of underwear and socks were tucked away aboard their speed plane.

Neither flier has a hat and they intend to be back in time to change shirts. The matter of shaving will be attended to at refuelling spots —now else the fliers may arrive back in New York with a week's growth of beard.

Col. Roscoe Turner announced from the Lockheed aircraft factory in Los Angeles that the fliers had refused to carry an extra propeller or spare motor parts.

"Wiley said the 'prop' would have to do because he did not want to carry the few added pounds of an emergency blade," Turner remarked.

Boardman Hopes to Start Sea Hop Tonight

New York, June 25 (AP)—Five more fliers, who hope to cross the Atlantic, were making preparations today to hop off on the first sign of good weather.

At Roosevelt Field, where Post and Gatty took off, George Endress and Sandor Magyar, plan to start for Hungary, their native land.

Clyde Pangborn, barnstorming pilot and his wealthy companion, Hugh Herndon, Jr., had hoped to start today, but later announced a Saturday start on a round-the-world flight.

Russell Boardman of Boston, pilot of the plane American Legion, said he would take off at midnight tonight for Paris. He intended to start yesterday, but his plane developed motor trouble. All five expect to stop in Newfoundland.

Ruth Nichols, who had hoped to be the first to start, still was in a hospital at St. John, N. B., injured as a result of her plane's crash at the landing field. She said she would try again in September.

Liberty Fire Alarm Rung in Joy Over Hillig

Liberty, N. Y., June 25 (AP)—The home town of Otto Hillig was jubilant today upon receipt of news of the safe landing of Hillig's transatlantic airplane at Krefeld, Germany, this afternoon.

The town, or at least the one man delegated to keep in touch with news of the plane, hung up the telephone receiver and dashed away to spread the news to the village by fire alarm.

EXAMINATION OF HOUSE ADDS TO MYSTERY OF CHOIR SINGER'S MURDER

Colt Voices a Weird Theory Connected With the Finding of Nine Heavy Dumbbells in One of the Rooms

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"
BY ANTHONY ABBOT

What Has Happened So Far

The bodies of a clergyman and a woman are found in a rowboat drifting in the East river in New York. Both had been shot and the woman's throat slit. The only clues are a cat and a leaf found in the boat. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt institutes a search to ascertain the identity of the victims. Impressions formed by Lederer, the city forester, that a tree with leaves similar to the one in the boat is located at Sangster Terrace, Colt and Tony Abbot, his secretary, investigate. The exclusive settlement is deserted except for Kraus, the watchman. He states that the cat belongs to a couple in house No. 13. Questioned further he admits leaving the grounds after receiving a telegram that his wife was ill. Colt asks to see the telegram.

Now Go on With the Story

"Why should anyone want nine dumbells in a room like this?" asked the commissioner.

WITH TREMBLING fingers Kraus fished the crumpled yellow sheet from his hip pocket. Colt glanced at it hastily, passed it to me with a caution to hold on to it. As I filed it away beside the love letter and the cat's pawprints, Colt returned to his attack.

"You're in a tough spot, Kraus," he said. "I can put you under arrest right now——"

"Please don't do it, Mr. Colt—I'll let you in the house if you don't——"

"Open up, then," snapped Colt.

"That telegram looks odd, too, Tony—a ruse to get the watchman away. The whole business takes on a peculiarly efficient air."

As he spoke, a spatter of large raindrops fell around us.

"And this rain," lamented Colt, "will wash away any traces that daylight might have shown us in the garden."

Fortunately, Kraus got the door open just then, revealing a long corridor, plunged in subtle shadows. With his hand lamp casting a path of light before us, Colt and I entered through the wide-arched back doorway to No. 13 Sangster terrace. I noticed that as we advanced down a hallway, Colt sniffed audibly several times.

"No smell of powder—no smell of fresh blood," he remarked, as he stepped at the newel-post of an ornamental staircase leading upward. "Kraus, are you there?"

"Here, sir."

"What are the rooms on this ground floor?"

"Servants' quarters—but not occupied now, sir."

"The rest of the house?"

"All belongs to the tenants."

"I intend to search this house from top to bottom. First turn on the lights in those servants' quarters—and you stay right here with us as we go through."

"I understand, Mr. Colt—at once."

A DISTINCT CLUE

Kraus's still trembling hand rattled the knob as he opened a huge, old-fashioned walnut door with carved panels. Stepping inside, Colt looked around it an unfurnished room, lit with a single dusty electric bulb. Again he lifted his nose and sniffed.

"Better luck this time, Tony," he rejoiced. "In this room there is a distinct odor of fresh paint and shavings."

"The servants had a lovely view," observed Thatcher Colt, sarcastically. "Was this a maid's room?"

"I used to be a billiard room," explained Kraus readily.

"What has it been used for recently?"

"I don't know. It's very seldom I come in here, Mr. Colt."

The commissioner turned to me.

"One shouldn't vault at conclusions," he murmured. "Yet I cannot help pointing out to ourselves, Tony, that there is a smell of fresh paint and shavings about, that a boat could have been kept here, or even built in this room, and lifted out of that window. At a pinch it could even be done as a one-man job."

Again he turned to the watchman.

"Kraus, you said the servants had not recently occupied these rooms."

"That's right, Mr. Colt. You see, the house belongs to a lady that's gone to live in a hotel. Her name is Mrs. Basil Wharton. She sublets it. In the winter she keeps a janitor here for the heat, and so forth. But not in the summer."

"I see. And who sublets it?"

"A young couple. Sadler is the name. They don't live here regular. They meet here, sometimes in the afternoon and sometimes in the night."

Even frightened as he was, Kraus gave his crooked-toothed grin of innuendo as he made this statement.

"Has Mrs. Sadler yellow hair?"

"Yes—she's a blonde."

"Blue eyes?"

"That's right."

"And has Mr. Sadler curly hair?"

"That's the man."

"Ever see anybody else here except Mr. and Mrs. Sadler since they sublet the house?"

"No—they never once had a visitor, as far as I know."

"Were Mr. and Mrs. Sadler here tonight?"

"No—not while I was here."

Colt turned moodily away and began studying the floor near the window with attentive care. Stooping at one spot, he trained the rays of his lamp on a discoloration on the floor.

"A speck of green paint," he announced. "And the rowboat was painted green."

Rising again, he turned his back on the window and his glance swept the room. The next moment he pushed me gently to one side, and strode toward the corner just behind me. Turning, I saw Thatcher Colt lift a strange object from the floor. It was a dumb-bell of black iron.

HEAVY DUMB-BELLS

"There are nine of these," announced Colt significantly.

I hastened to lift one in my own hands. It was very heavy. I glanced at my chief in bewilderment and voiced my question.

"Why should anyone want nine heavy dumbbells in a room like this?"

Colt's glance was solemn.

"I am almost afraid to guess," he rejoined. "And yet—suppose the cutting of Evelyn's throat was not an act of malicious fury, after all. Assume, instead, that it was the purpose of the murderer to dismember the bodies, weight the pieces with these dumbbells, row out on the river—ah, if that were so, then what could have interrupted the infernal plan?"

A moment later, Colt found a pair of oars standing in another corner. Then, with a final glance around the room, he turned to Kraus.

"All right, let's go now."

Upon Colt's instructions, the caretaker led us up four flights of stairs to the attic and thence we worked our way down.

At the very foot of the staircase on the second floor we came to our first unmistakably authentic piece of evidence. Two traveling-bags were in the corner, under the stairs, and painted on one end of each, in white letters, were the initials, "F. S."

Without a word, Colt dragged them out into the open space of the landing directly below a wall-light. Kneeling beside them, he tried the locks; they opened at a touch and his deft hands rummaged rapidly through their contents.

IRONIC NAME

"The trade-marked name of this brand of luggage is 'Revelation,'" muttered Colt. "Rather an ironic and biblically appropriate touch, one might fancy."

But the search of the two bags helped us scarcely at all. There was nothing in them that would yield us an immediate identification.

Making no comment, he next led the way to the rear parlor on the second floor.

The only modern note was a telephone on a taboret

Colt went instantly to the telephone and, pulling his handkerchief over the receiver to avoid obliterating possible finger-prints, asked for information.

"Hello, Information. In what name is the telephone Excelsior 09872 listed?"

As he waited the commissioner's glances seemed to scour walls, floor, ceiling, furniture.

"What name did you say? Mrs. Basil Wharton? Thank you."

As he hung up the receiver he looked solemnly at me.

"I'll have to put a man on that lady's trail. Ever hear of Mrs. Basil Wharton, Tony?"

"Never, chief."

"She's a very nice rich lady with nothing to make her different from other people except a whole lot of luck," offered Kraus.

"She owns the house—the phone is still kept in her name."

Restlessly, impatiently, Colt looked around him. His face had a baffled, tormented expression. His eyes, traversing wall after wall, suddenly narrowed.

"There is at least one object that hangs awkwardly!" he drawled. Following his gaze, I saw suspended on the wall a long and gleaming knife, a cleaver-like weapon, with both edges ground to razor sharpness.

"That cutlass," said Thatcher Colt, "is called a barong. I have seen the thing in actual use by the Moros of Mindanao and the natives of the Sulu Archipelago. It is quite effective in decapitation."

He took a step nearer, studying it intently.

"I wonder how it got there!"

"Oh, that belongs to Mrs. Wharton," explained Kraus. "She used to be a great traveler when she was young. I've heard her tell about that knife."

"Yes—but you see," said Colt, drawing nearer to the weapon and casting at me a melancholy smile, "there is dust on the wallpaper all around the knife—see it on my finger tip—but the blade is quite freshly polished. You might even imagine it was cleaned within the hour. This greatly puzzles me. Everything else in this business was so clever, so matchlessly executed—and that detail is certainly bunglesome! It is an impropriety, an incongruity, a solecism in an otherwise virtuose exhibition."

MYSTERY IN R. I. MAN'S DEATH

Denver, June 25 (INS)—Denver police today faced the problem of solving the mystery surrounding the death of Lieut. Frank D. Harris, 34, of the Colorado National Guard, aviator, bond salesman and scion of a wealthy Providence, R. I., family.

Harris' body was found slumped over the wheel of his automobile.

Investigation so far has not revealed the manner in which Harris died. No wounds were found on the body. The fact that all three doors to the garage stood wide open eliminated any theory of carbon monoxide poisoning.

HULTMAN WILL PROBE TIEUP IN TRAFFIC

Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman today promised to have an investigation made of the complaint of Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Rourke who, asserting traffic commissioner, charged failure to prevent illegal parking in the Back Bay and complete lack of co-operation by the police.

Through his secretary Bernard F. Scanlan, the police head said:

"The complaint will be investigated in the regular way, like all other complaints to the police department.

"If there are any serious traffic situations they will be reported to the commissioner by the various captains. Until these reports come in I have nothing further to say."

Criticizing Commissioner Hultman's granting of taxi stand permits for Massachusetts ave., Rourke charged that these stands seriously tie up traffic and were allotted after the traffic commission had restricted parking there.

Rourke further charged that Hultman had refused to issue tags to traffic policemen, that motorists were allowed to ignore traffic signal lights with impunity and that traffic officers failed to assist in traffic movement on bad corners.

Rourke's statement came on the heels of a complaint of postoffice authorities that the movement of mail is hampered by the regulation of traffic.

POLICE GUARD SCHULTZ GRILL

New York, June 25 (AP)—Policemen, acting under orders of Dist.-Atty. McLaughlin of the Bronx, today were assigned to guard a grill room and offices, reported to be owned by Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, beer lord of upper New York.

Mr. McLaughlin, on learning Federal authorities might find it difficult to prosecute Schultz on income tax evasion charges because of lack of evidence, ordered an immediate investigation of the beer-runner's strongholds in his county.

Accompanied by detectives, Mr. McLaughlin visited the Boston rd. resort, said to be operated by henchmen of Schultz's. A policeman was left on duty to watch for law violations. On the fourth floor of the Terminal Building, an office structure, the raiders found a huge safe, shotguns and barred, steel doors.

Priests' Plea in Church Row Denied

Vera Cruz, Mexico, June 25 (AP)—Judge Manuel Bartlett of the Second District Court has rejected a petition filed by Catholic priests for permanent injunction against the recently enacted law limiting to 11 the number of priests allowed to officiate in the state of Vera Cruz.

The decision was rendered on the ground that there had been no attempt as yet to eject the excess number of priests.

Took it Before Baby Came

"Never in Bed a Day!"

DON'T they look healthy? This is Mrs. H. L. Buell and her young daughter, of Marietta, Ohio.

Listen to what she says...

"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I came into womanhood. I was so nervous, that I couldn't rest at night.

"After I took your compound I felt so very much better.

"Then before my baby was born I took the compound again. I felt well and strong through the period. "I was never in bed a day. I could rest good at night too.

"I praise your compound very highly. There has never been any other medicine that has done me so much good."

If you feel tired, nervous, run-down... why don't you try a few bottles of Vegetable Compound.

BATCHELDER–READ WEDDING IN CAMBRIDGE TODAY

A THRONG OF NICE LOOKING MEN, YOUNG, MIDDLE-AGED and a few old-timers, jumped off the buses in front of a low, rambling yellow house and rushed up to shake hands with the mistress of this hospitable dwelling, sure of a welcome. "Hello, Danny!" "Glad you came, Jack!" "How's the arm, Bill?" Mrs. Curtis Guild greeted her "boys" yesterday at her annual outing for the soldiers and sailors in the Naval and Marine Hospitals and the Soldiers' Home.

And were they pleased to see her? This was no mere gesture of a grande dame doing a publicity stunt. No, sir, it was a meeting of friends, somebody who remembered that the boys who stay most of their lives in hospitals would enjoy a glimpse of the sea, a few lively tunes on a real brass band, funny stories and a laugh, while puffing away on their favorite weed.

It was a grand old party. Congressman Bill Connery of Lynn son: it off to a good start with his French and American version of the old tune, "Madelon"; his French was perfect—as we don't parlez vous Francaise—and his gestures were eloquent. What a grin the boys got out of that? He then told a few amusing stories in a manner which a professional would envy, and kept the crowd laughing till their sides ached. Have you heard the one about King George's last illness—how they needed a red-blooded human for a blood transfusion, and not finding one to their satisfaction in England they sent over to Ireland for him. After six transfusions from the Irishman, the King jumped out of bed and shouted, "To hell with the King!" Good?

MISS ROSE ZULALIAN

Miss Rose Zulalian Sings for Veterans

WELL, THEY HAD MORE SONGS AND A MAGICIAN, and Miss Rose Zulalian sang some patriotic airs, with two stanzas of "The Star Spangled Banner"—we didn't know anyone knew the second verse—and then—oh, yes, some of the sprightly ones ran about throwing potatoes in a pail. It was quite exciting. The army and the navy had a tug-o'-war, and we can't tell you who won it was so close. And over all presided the maternal spirit of Mrs. Guild, dispensing candy, cigarettes, a few words to this one and that one, greeting several of her guests who came in to assist.

THE PRINCESS CANTACUZENE brought her two children over for the fun and she looked very lovely in a yellow print, the little Princess Irina in green and Prince Rodion wore a sailor costume, quite appropriately. Also hugely enjoying the show was Mrs. Thomas Storrow and her two beautiful children, young Charles and Sister Anne.

COL. FRANK L. CONVERSE of the 181st Infantry entertained the occasion and Mrs. Converse was also present. It was just a nice informal afternoon. Miss Edith Sigourney dropped in and, to give a military touch, Cemdr. Samuel Clement and Lieut.-Comdr. Alexander McDonald presented Miss Sigourney themselves in uniform. And we are going to be quite frank to admit that a uniform always allures us. However, we counted ten, if you know what we mean.

* * *

AFTER THE TREASURE hunt which was novel and lots of fun the winners came up to Mrs. Guild for their prizes, and it would have done anyone good to see it. After all these years, the war over, busy days, and so strong as when she graced the European courts, but she never forgets, never is too busy or too ill to make her monthly visit to the hospitals and to say a prayer before her cherished shrine for the boys who did their bit, as she is doing here.

A Perfect Day

OF COURSE, THE ALL KIND Providence provided a perfect day, clear and cool and sunny, and eating supper on the green slopes gazing out over the blue ocean, gave the guests a lovely picture to take back with them to the city. The Curtis Guild women's auxiliary presented Madame Guild with a beautiful bouquet of flowers, and the gang gave three cheers for their benefactress. Sergt. Downey served as aide, and Capt. Charles L. Winston of RKO, with his brother, Thomas Winston, helped to keep things moving. It was a whangdinger of a jamboree, and there should be more of them by those who have the time and money to contribute.

Organdie and Taffetas in Great Favor

By ANN ARDEN

PERFECTLY priceless prettiness is with us again—organdie, taffetas jackets, ribbon sashes, fluttering ruffles and the Victorian combination of baby pink and baby blue. Confections—that's what they are, and given the stamp of approval by the smartest sophisticates. And just to show how important are the newly revived batistes, organdies and nets—silk is combined with them as an accessory—in little jackets and ribbon trims. The contrast thus achieved has a large portion of charm about it, as in the costume pictured.

PALE BLUE organdie fashions the gown, made over rustling taffetas slip, the many-gored skirt marked by undulating ruffles. The decolletage is bound and of medium depth. The tie sash is of pink grosgrain ribbon; a pink taffetas jacket, its edges bound in blue, is an able escort for this frilly frock. The jacket top extends to sleeve length, the fronts turn back in tuxedo-like revers, and the folded belt ties center front.

EVENING sandals of white linen, and pink fabric gloves stress the pastel colors. The whole effect is one of the early nineties, when girls were girls, and sweet ones too. The variety of jackets is amazing, of course—but those tiny but oh, so brightly-colored wisps that are being worn with evening gowns are the most delightful of all. Some just reach the waist and others make a tentative gesture about the top of the hips. The secret of this jacket's success is—color; it must make a brilliant daub against a frock, often it echoes the brightest print in a patterned gown. Usually they can be worn with several frocks.

WHETHER the summer organdie or dotted Swiss dress shall have a ribbon belt is something of a question. But when you see the little belts of braided ribbon with rosebuds woven into the braiding and tiny streamers of the ribbon hanging down a bit at back, your decision will doubtless be in that direction. One of blue and pink ribbon with pink rosebuds was worn on a blue organdie frock.

A VETERAN TESTIFIES; MOVIES FOR MALES

—By Gilbert Seldes—

THE SIGNATURE TO A LETTER is seldom more interesting than the letter itself, especially if the signature happens to be a blank. A few days ago Mr. Richard Daniels wrote to deny my suspicion that a universal desire to go back to the trenches existed in Europe.

Today I have a letter from an American, which says that this desire grows stronger every day. "I am still a very young man," the letter continues. "Just past 30, and have never been the same since I came home in 1919. I dream many nights of the days in the lines and honestly pray for another war. Maybe this is the only cure for this country, as well as our late allies—and maybe it will either make or break the nerves of us who once were over there." That is all of the letter, and the signature is: "Just another 'Vet' who has never had a day's peace of mind since those days of 'certain freedoms and certain decencies.'"

Peace of Mind

The impressive thing to me is the suggestion that there was actual peace of mind at the front. I cannot testify, because I was at the front only as a civilian, and my service in uniform was in South Carolina. The freedom I spoke of began with the day of induction into the army. The barrack room door was always open, and you did not have to carry a key. The job you did was perhaps policing the parade ground for cigarette stubs, but it was a job thought out and supervised by some one else. There was no responsibility and there were no worries.

Everybody in a rank received the same amount of pay, and there were only a limited number of things one could buy. The whole complication of modern industrial and social life vanished when you put on khaki. This isn't exactly the brutality of warfare, but I can quite see why people long for it. What the war itself added was a dim and terrible knowledge of life and death, and that, too, has been missing since.

The Fury of the Old Men

The "Vet" who writes me is just over 30 and must have been very young for a soldier. If we have a war in the next four or five years he will have his wish. But this question of age makes me think of the men who will certainly not be called up in the first draft, the men who will be over 40 and who will not only be properly patriotic, but without knowing it will envy their own sons and will be shouting for war like the superannuated British colonels who made such a spectacle of themselves in the clubs during the last war.

The war haters will accuse them of hypocrisy and bad blood; they will say that the old men want to kill off the young; they will refuse to believe that the desire for the trenches is genuine. I hate to admit it myself, but I suspect that people will really and quite honestly want the trenches again.

Movies for Men

I saw another male movie the other night. The distinguishing marks of male movies are these: Love is treated as an amiable weakness and purely as an episode; it has no importance. Women, although seductive, are not attractive. Physical violence is done to women. Men are tough and certain substitutions are made which convey the same meanings as the hard words of the locker room and the smoker. The ending is usually unhappy.

You can find all these characteristics in Little Caesar, Public Enemy, the Front Page, the Maltese Falcon and Smart Money, and all of these pictures are way above the average, and Public Enemy is way above the rest of them.

New and Good

This is a new phenomenon on the screen. The bad men of the silent movies, best represented by W. S. Hart, was a thorough-going sentimentalist. He loved his bright-eyed gal and fought and bled for her. The new bad man takes his impossible blondes in his stride and shrugs his shoulders when he turns them out on their faces. I suspect that this is a far more important event in the movie world than the invention of the talkie mechanism, because it will shift the balance of the audience and bring more men to the pictures.

I do not pretend that this will automatically raise the level of intelligence. The talkies have, in fact, shown a parallel development in the treatment of women. The recent successes of Ruth Chatterton and Norma Shearer suggest that a new type of appeal is being exploited. But the male movie, even if it remains over-tough and deals only with gamblers and racketeers, does add a sense of truth and actuality to the pictures and gives them a new field of adventure which all of us can understand, and, to an extent, take part in.

The Missing Clinch

The unhappy ending has, in fact, touched even the feminine type of film. Ladies' Man ended with the death of the attractive hero. In a few years a hardboiled critic will arise to remind us that the unhappy ending is false and artificial, and even sentimental, and that for harsh truth, we really ought to go back to the clinch, the kiss and the fadeout. For those with memories this will be a cue for laughter.

Reticence Rewarded

Everybody else who writes a daily piece for a newspaper has been interested in the announced retirement of Calvin Coolidge as a columnist. Those who admire him less than others have spoken of his habit of saying undisputed things in such a solemn way, without perhaps realizing that Mr. Coolidge may think it necessary to repeat that two and two make four when half the world is going off into the fourth dimension where two and two may make five. But what is the point of inviting competition from amateurs?

Feminine

I don't like contract bridge
Or golf or tennis.
I concentrate on being
Just a menace

A Great Life

—By Bruno Lessing—

OSTEND—It's really an old story. Missouri farmer sitting on a rail fence with a couple of hundred hogs on the hillside behind him. Along comes a stranger who says:

"Brother, why have ye got all them hogs up on the hillside?"

"They're feedin'," says the farmer.

"Feedin'? There's nothing up there but stones! Why don't you put 'em all down on the other side o' the road where there's a lot of pasture?"

"Why?" says the farmer.

"To save time," says the stranger. The farmer gazes at the stranger for a long time.

"What's time to a hog?" says he.

TRAVELING through Germany and Holland into Belgium—heading for France—that story hits you forcibly. When a German or a Dutchman says 2 o'clock, he means 2 o'clock. The same with a Scandinavian. The moment you get into a Latin country—or a semi-Latin country like Belgium—2 o'clock means anywhere between noon and sundown.

If, like the Missouri hog, time means nothing to you, you derive amusement from your experiences. But if time does mean something, you get no end of irritation from the carelessness of the Latin outlook.

The northern part of Belgium is Flemish, both in fibre and habit, and that means that while its inhabitants may be stubborn and phlegmatic, they are sturdy. When they say 2 o'clock, they mean 2 o'clock and not quarter past two.

When they promise you a room in an hour, you may get it that day or not. When they promise you a bit of work on a certain day, you may get it that week or not. The phrase, "in a minute," or "half a second," means anywhere from half an hour to a day. The worst of it is that they get sore when you attempt to define the astronomical or mathematical duration of a minute or an hour. What's the difference? they say.

STRUCK a religious holiday between Ghent and Bruges. Two towns in Belgium whose history runs back centuries before America was discovered.

Tried to find out just what the holiday was about and found that it was a local holiday, based on one particular section of the Bible, and wasn't being celebrated anywhere else.

Too bad that there is no American embassy or consulate in the neighborhood.

IT'S a great life, this foreign service. All our embassies and legations and consulates are so polite that they shut up shop on all local holidays and take a day off. Then, of course, they have to shut up shop on Lincoln's Birthday and Washington's Birthday and Decoration Day and the Fourth of July and Columbus Day and Labor Day and Thanksgiving Day—to the mystification of the natives. So they get holidays coming and going.

Add all the French, Belgian and Italian holidays to the American ones—and bring up your boy to be a diplomat. Maybe the League of Nations will establish a few new ones. Anyway, a 30-day year may not be a bad idea.

Murderesses

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

MURDERERS—AND PARTICULARLY murderesses—have always held a sinister fascination for us. A good old-fashioned sensational murder in the papers, and we are at once curiously alert. Our ears tingle. Our head is in a whirl.

Personally, we cannot understand a murderer: yet we know several worthy and intelligent people who admit that they would gladly kill some one—even several people—if they could get away with it! We know nothing of such an emotion. And so ours is a vicarious interest in those who run the risk of being electrocuted or hanged.

Today we are in the throes of innumerable sensational cases that reek with mystery and excitement. We are quick to condemn the police when a murderer is not found and arrested at once; but we are not so swift to praise them when, as in the case of the doctor in Brooklyn the other day, his assassin was discovered only a few brief days after he had committed his foul deed. Clever detective work thrills us in books, but we seem adamant when it occurs in real life.

Nan Patterson

When our town was smaller, the net was not so vast. Yet things could be swallowed up in mystery then, as now.

We were thinking last night of the Nan Patterson case, and how it woke our city out of its lethargy. Was Caesar Frank actually shot by Miss Patterson in that hansom cab, we asked one another in that far-off day.

We remembered a bright story that lighted up the dingy and sordid scene. Richard La Gallienne, coming to America for the first time, was delegated by one of our morning papers to report the case in his own way.

During the final days of the trial—it was summer, and the courtroom was exceedingly hot—the assistant district attorney was firing question after question at the weary Miss Patterson.

"Did you, or did you not, fire that fatal shot in the cab?" finally he shouted at her.

And La Gallienne, with charming naivette, wrote:

"I could not catch the answer, as just then a trolley car went by in the street below."

Reporters all over the city were in gales of laughter over this delicate piece of reportorial labor. "Try to get by with your city editor with that!" they said to one another. And they envied the English poet the care-free service he rendered.

We found ourselves one day at the famous Harry Thaw trial. We heard Evelyn Nesbit testify, clad in the simplest frock so that she should look more innocent and girlish than ever. It was down at the old Tombs courthouse; and after Thaw himself had given his testimony, somehow he caught our eye as he was being led back over the Bridge of Sighs to the dim prison beyond.

That curious eye never left us. It held us with a sort of sinister power. We remember his hunched shoulder, his long, shambling stride as he was taken away; and though we knew he was guilty, we recall a human sympathy even for him, for we were certain that he was a madman.

We never saw him again until about two years ago, when we entered a smart speakeasy just off Park ave.

A white-haired man was sitting at a table near by, surrounded by a gay party of young men and girls. There was something vaguely familiar about him; and suddenly we realized who he was. As he got up to leave, again he caught our eye, and we vow there was the same strange look in it which we had never forgotten.

Life and Death

And we remember being in the country on a beautiful spring day after the four gunmen had been convicted in the Rosenthal case. We were not far from Sing Sing; and all day, while the processes flamed in the garden, and the sky was as blue as we have ever seen it, and the whole world was a song, we could not get the thought out of our mind that before another day had dawned, those four pitiful little fellows would be marched to the chair.

We do not happen to believe in capital punishment; and yet, even if anyone is sent away to serve a life of loneliness behind prison walls we shudder, too. Anyone who has read Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" feels differently ever after about the Death House.

In those final powerful chapters, when the lad is awaiting his execution there is a strain, a wrench to our placid emotions which we can never forget. It is as if we ourselves were there, suffering with him; and it is the strongest argument against a cruel system which we have ever read.

But in our sympathy for those thus to be destroyed, we must not forget the victims of their passion. Too often we do; and therein lies the weakness of our reasoning.

QUESTION AND ANSWER DEPT. AL:

One of your constant readers called this evening (reports Eddie Martin, who sits in on the night desk at the American) and said that he tried that telephone suggestion you had in your column . . . our story you remember you said "and see what you get." Well, this born asked me if I knew who you were supposed to get after you dialed the said numbers. I told him I wasn't sure but I doubted that you got anything—even a connection. He said he tried the numbers prescribed and he could hear an old lady saying, "Hello?—Hello-hello."

Now the gent wants to know if that was what he was supposed to get and if everyone gets the "old lady" when they dial said numbers.

I asked him if he would give me his name and address and I'd have you answer him.

"I've been sucker enough to bite on the suggestion but as far as making it known to my friends—that's a-n-t." he responded. "I'll watch the column for the answer," he added.

So now it's up to you to placate this guy. And for cryin' out loud will you cut out running them there puzzles and games in that column of yours. I have enough to do here nights without answering a lot of damfool questions.

EDDIE MARTIN

DEAR EDDIE:

Is it my fault that he got an "old lady?" Did I guarantee anything when I wrote that about the dial telephoning? Besides, how could he tell that she was an "old lady?" He was just sore because it wasn't a young gay girl.

And another thing—why should you crab about people calling you up and asking questions? What do you get your dough for? Isn't it part of your job to keep our readers entertained and hoppy? I guess that'll hold you for awhile. AL DUFFY.

Smart press agents have saved the lives of people in show business on many occasions, but the tables were turned the other day when Zelda Sattley, famous vaudeville headliner, rescued her press agent, Frank Brown, from drowning.

Aboard Submarine Nautilus, en route from Cork, Ireland, to Devenport, Eng., June 25—The Nautilus is now en route under tow across St. George's Channel and up the English Channel to Devenport, where the engine and motors which broke down on the cross-Atlantic voyage will be repaired for the trip under the ice to the North Pole.

In two previous dispatches I told how the breakdowns left us helpless in the Atlantic, 1000 miles from the Irish coast, how the U. S. battleships Arkansas and Wyoming plowed through heavy seas to our rescue.

After the Wyoming took us in tow we thought we would soon solve our motor trouble and get going under our own power. The electricians and I turned to the motors in the main motor room, which was filthy with oil and grease. With the engines stopped, the batteries down in the bilges could not be pumped air, and the circulating system was idle.

LAYERS OF GREASE

Used oil and salt water swilled about in the inner workings of the delicate machinery. Scraps from the months of construction work still rattled beneath them. Grease in thick layers coated all the framework. The filthy condition of the room was a downright disgrace It should have been remedied before putting to sea. With the whole place stinking filthy, no wonder the electricians aboard failed to keep it clean.

Two or three of the stouter hearts stayed with me most of the night swabbing the pole pieces, armatures and commutors. Tests were made for short circuits and we found a dead one. In the control box some part had been removed and carelessly left lying so that when the ship rolled it locked beneath an important working part. With this and the filth it is no wonder we had no motor.

CREW TAKEN SICK

In the early hours of the morning many of the crew began to show signs of illness. Sailors years at sea without knowing seasickness began vomiting. To make matters worse, we were now in a storm area and were battened down like galley slaves. The air in every room was frightful. But it was not from seasickness we suffered, it was more like poisoning.

Conditions became at last so unbearable that Jack Lundbeck and some others of us turned again to the port motor, hoping that if we could get that in order we could start the good port engine and clear the atmosphere. They finally got it going and soon cleared the air. The affect on everybody was instantaneous. The crew drank in the fresh air, but they were still sick men. Hot food and drinks were absent, since the cook was among the sickest of the sick and so was the mess boy.

The engine crew carried on in spite of everything. The port engine at work ate up some 90 amperes. To keep its cooling system in operation and in order not to completely ruin the batteries, the auxiliary was kept running. This meant more filth and evil smells. The fumes were making everyone sick.

STEERING GEAR GOES BAD

Then early one morning the steering gear went haywire. The ship sheered abruptly and the towing line parted.

Finally the gear began kicking up again and for two days and nights we drifted perilously. Then on Saturday came better weather. An officer and several hands came over from the Wyoming to replace our towing gear. With the boat from the battleship had come fresh bread and supplies and some fresh water.

By Sunday the majority of the crew began to feel spry again. While being towed we cleaned up the mess that had accumulated. Thus we arrived in Cork Harbor Monday.

After our starboard engine has been repaired, our motors tuned and the ship given a thorough cleaning we will be ready for Bergen, Norway, and a final fitting before pushing further north and then to the pole.

REAL CIRCUS DELIGHTS ARE FOUND ONLY IN A TENT!

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

MY WIFE AND I HAVE one favorite springtime debate. She, having been brought up in New York and Philadelphia, the Babylon and Nineveh of our world, holds that a circus is no good outside the Garden—either the old Madison Square edifice under the golden Diana or the new Boston Garden. I brought up in Worcester, Mass. a year or two ahead of Master Robert Benchley, the wit and comedian, have no truck with such goings-on. Circuses not under a tent, I remark, are not circuses. They are hippodromic vaudevilles, if you like; they are Gargantuan sumptuous and sophisticated spectacles—but they are not circuses.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The result of all this is that we have to go twice. In May to the Garden when the monster show is new and fresh and shining, incredibly elaborate and artificial. Going to the circus under such auspices requires almost as much forethought, formality and expenditure as going to the opera—except that it is, after all, rather more fun.

What a Real Circus Looks Like

For my innings I have to wait till June or July. Then if I am lucky a little circus comes within driving distance, and then I show my wife and daughter (who rather leans to the metropolitan theory of circus-going) what a circus should be like. Three rings at most, no platforms, scanty apparatus and scantier personnel, the narrowest and most unfortunate seats in the world, even narrower than those at the Harvard Stadium, and the pervading smell of the good brown earth and sawdust and animals. So far as smell is concerned, when you are at the Garden you do not even know you are at a circus.

This year it was better than usual. In our town the circus came smack in the middle of a week of rain. It rained all morning, it was raining when the show began, only toward the end was there a watery sunshine. The circus ground was a sea of rutted mud. They had not bothered even to put up the menagerie tent, and one wandered about in the drizzle, but under the sky, watching the animals that seemed so much more natural, somehow, than under the artificial light of the tent.

On the other hand, the old, old mystery of the freak tent, the sideshow, was as strong as ever. At the Garden they exhibit the freaks with the menagerie—no extra charge, no mystery, no ballyhoo. Is that any way to treat freaks, I ask you? Without the hoarse gentleman with the gong and the flow of language, the blare of the little band, and the momentary tantalizing glimpse of Esmeralda, the Python Queen, or Myra, the Mystic Mind-Reader, the whole thing goes flat.

The Mystery of Reserved Seats

Inside there was the same difficulty about getting reserved seats from which one could see anything. Why is it that circus reserved seats are invariably sold in such a way that, no matter where they are, they are wrong? I exchanged three seats behind a pole for three more—behind another pole. You may as well try to extract blood from a turnip as decent reserved seats from the gentleman who sells them. The good seats are always somewhere else! And when we found them, they were beautifully wet and muddy, as well they might be after a week of rain.

There was one great disappointment. There was no circus band, that leather-lunged aggregation that for two hours never stops blowing and beating at a furiously fast tempo. Instead, a monster kind of calliope (pronounced in three syllables, please), with phonograph records and an amplifier, blatted and blared in a vain attempt to give the old-time effect—and failed dismally.

It was a small, hard-working circus. The girls who took tickets in the reserved sections showed up later as equestrians, and one was always recognizing an old face in a new act. Only the trapeze people and the one troupe of bareback riders seemed to be specialists. But I am sure that the lady tight-rope walker showed up later in a troupe of gymnasts, and the riders of the high school horses also swung on suspended ladders in time to waltz music, ladders so wet and muddy that when the girls took their bow at the end of the act they were smeared from head to foot. But the trapezes were swathed in protective coverings. You don't fool with a slippery trapeze.

What made this circus unique nowadays were the wild animal acts. You don't often see them any more. In spite of all the agitation about the cruelty of trained animals, I confess I like to see the cats perform. There were leopards, sly and reluctant and bad-tempered; lions, slow and stupid and obviously nervous of the big man who made such an unnecessary fuss with his whip and his revolver; and, best of all, the tigers, who were the most intelligent of all, beautifully trained, quick and eager, superb public performers. Besides them even the elephants, those bored routineers, seemed amateurs.

The Show Must Go on!

The performers plodded in and out in clogs that sunk deep into trampled mud. Everything they touched, ropes, apparatus, hoops and all, was wet and filthy. They laughed and joked with one another about it, as they had been doing for a week past. The white roustabouts in their sodden uniforms looked drawn and exhausted, as if they had had about all they could stand, but the Negro stage crew seemed extraordinarily fit and happy. They moved like clock-work, with far more rapidity and precision than the white men. And to see them swarm up and over the iron cage, to dismantle it after the cat acts were over, was as good a show as any in the performance.

Watching those tired, bedraggled performers carrying on with unquenchable spirit and courage, I remembered that here, in 1931, was the same old circus as it has carried on through the centuries. Here, too, was the birthplace of the theater. Young Will Shakespeare's fellow performers knew conditions like these, rain and mud and weariness. Moliere, with his tent show in the south of France, before he settled in Paris under the patronage of the king, suffered everything that these performers suffered. The greatest American actors of the past played in tents and barns and show-boats, under every condition of vagabondage.

The show must go on! The modern circus has gasoline tractors and electric lights instead of long lines of horses and naphtha flares—but there is still the rain and the mud and the cold. In the spirit of these people I find something genuine, something fundamental, that our pampered and expensive performers of today, playing under luxurious conditions are no longer able to give us. The arts, like most other things, flourish best when conditions are not too easy.

FIRST LESSON IN ART COURSE

This is the first lesson of the Boston Evening American's absorbing course in pen and ink drawing.

John J. Maguire, the Evening American artist who starts you off, writes today on the fundamentals of drawing that you must know before you can go on to the more advanced fields.

By JOHN J. MAGUIRE

Boston American Staff Artist

The first thing in learning to draw is to be careful to work in a good light. It is better to work in daylight if you can, but if you work at night, make sure that your light comes either from directly above, or over your left shoulder.

If you have a drawing table, arrange your ink and pens on it as shown in the drawing. If not, spread a newspaper over any table and arrange them there.

DRAW STRAIGHT LINE

Start with a piece of drawing paper cut eight inches square and lay it flat on your table. If you are using a drawing board, tack your paper to the board with thumb tacks. Now roll up your sleeves and take a deep breath. You're about to become an artist.

Your first attempt will be to draw a straight line with a ruler. Sounds easy, doesn't it? But you will probably find that it will take you several tries before you can get a clear line without a smear.

Measure in one inch from the edge of your paper all around and with a ruler and pencil draw a margin lightly. Now take some ink on your pen and, with your ruler, draw over the pencil lines.

Make sure that the edge of your ruler is lifted slightly from the paper, otherwise, when you take the ruler away, the line will smear.

Can you copy the first figure in the model? Sketch it out in pencil then ink it in. Don't use your ruler, this time.

Take care to make your ink lines firm and strong, not wavy and "scared looking." That was easy, wasn't it?

IT LOOKS EASY

These first figures look simple but remember that simplicity is the keynote of our work. Some of the characters drawn by our most noted cartoonists consist of just a few lines, but they have won fame

SLEEP POWDER FATAL TO WIFE

Despite efforts of Everett firemen to revive her, Mrs. Doris McCready, wife of Frank McCready of 22A Calhoun ave, Everett, died at her home today from an overdose of sleeping powders. Medical Examiner Frits W. Gey pronounced death as accidental.

McCready said his wife had taken the powders before retiring last night and when she awoke at morning complained of not feeling well. McCready went into the kitchen for some warm milk and when he returned to the bedroom found his wife had collapsed.

He summoned a physician. Members of the fire department worked for more than three-quarters of an hour to revive her without avail.

HORSES' TAILS CLIPPED, BARN IS WRECKED

Truck Is Smashed in Collision at Bristol County School

A series of "high jinks" that claimed the tails of at least five horses were under investigation today to Bristol County Agricultural School in Taunton.

The tails were shorn by some of the boy students in pranks that included also the wrecking of a barn and an ice truck.

Director George H. Gilbert, admitting an investigation was underway, declined to discuss it. He said disciplinary action would be taken by the school itself when the guilty boys are found.

The long, bushy tails of the horses were found clipped almost at the same time that the ice truck was wrecked in collision with the barn.

Drunken Man Dances on Top of 50-Foot Tower—and Lives

He probably doesn't know today that he did it, but he should be thankful he's alive.

All of which concerns an inebriated Lynn man who climbed the 50-foot tower atop a six-story factory on Summer st, Lynn, last night, danced a jig and then descended safely while strong men wilted from the sight.

Police, armed with ropes and other rescue appliances, made a fast trip to the factory when telephone calls started coming in, but by the time they arrived the alcoholic adventurer had disappeared.

None could furnish his name nor recall having seen him before, but all agreed that his name should be in lights—or epitaph.

DIVORCEE ADMITS WHOOPEE

Mrs. Mae F. Carpenter, Belmont divorcee, fighting in Middlesex court for possession of her four children, today admitted cocktail and highball parties with "Ted Barnard" of Wellesley. (Staff photo.)

'TED BARNARD' IS NAMED IN COURT SUIT

Wife Admits Being on Cocktail Parties in Various Places With Wellesley Man

A new "boy friend" of Mrs. Mae Carpenter entered her hearing on a petition for custody of four children today in Middlesex court.

She named him as "Ted Barnard of Wellesley" during admissions of cocktail parties in a Back Bay hotel; in Barnard's home; Cocoanut Grove; the Show Boat and a Marblehead inn.

She admitted authorship of a letter to her husband that she signed "Strange Interlude" and in which she told him she "just missed a ride in the Wellesley Black Maria," after a visit to Barnard's home while the latter's wife and family were away.

Mrs. Carpenter was divorced from James L. Carpenter, Belmont traveling salesman, last November.

She seeks custody of Virginia, 7; James, 6, Charles, 5, and Patricia, 4, who now live with their paternal grandmother, Mrs. Charlotte S Carpenter of 2 Brimmer st., Beacon Hill.

NEVER DRUNK, SHE SAYS

Under cross-examination by Atty Edward W. Kenney, Mrs. Carpenter admitted her failure to distinguish cocktails from highballs in a separate concerning the ingredients of each.

She admitted parking in front of her home in Belmont following a hotel party, but said it was for only five minutes.

All through the examination she maintained consistently that she had liquor but was never drunk in her life.

She said her husband gave her a reputation for saying things that sounded bad, her charge being made during cross-examination over money she received from a $4000 annuity left the children by Charles Lincoln Carpenter, their grandfather.

Mrs. Carpenter, after testifying that her marriage to Carpenter 10 years ago was her first marriage admitted she was mother of four children born before that time.

The questions that brought the admissions came as a surprise and followed a lengthy conference at the bench.

She said the children were 14, 10, 17 and 18 years old, but did not disclose their identities or whereabouts.

They are not in her custody but she visits them two or three times a week, she testified.

FLAMES HUSBAND

"You put it over on the trustee as often as you could, didn't you?" she was asked.

"I don't think so," she answered. "It have a reputation for saying things that sound bad but are not."

The remark moved Attorney Kenney to further questioning on an indecent letter Mrs. Carpenter admitted yesterday she wrote to a man referred to, "C. B. O.," an American League official and radio man.

Q.—Where did you get that reputation? A.—My husband gave it to me.

Q.—Beginning quoting from letter) "I would like to kiss your eyes right now, you great big radio announcer." Is your husband responsible for your writing this? A.—Yes.

"GOD'S WET BLANKET"

Q.—Did he tell you to tell C. B. O. you married "God's" wet blanket? A.—Yes.

Q.—Surely he didn't tell you to ask C. B. O. to send a picture of himself? A.—Yes, he thought it might be a good thing to have around.

Q.—What did you mean in your letter, "It's my sin just loving you"? A.—That was a popular song at the time.

Interrupting her cross-examination William F Calthorpe, Watertown taxi driver, was placed on the stand for Mrs. Carpenter.

He told of driving Mrs. Carpenter and a woman friend to Ashburnham and finding the Carpenter children at play in a cold rain and without shoes or stockings. She was refused permission to take them riding, she testified.

DAILY TRUE STORY

NO WEDDING BELLS

"READ THIS," SAID LAWYER HEALY

GLADYS RANDALL, whom the daily press had given a glamorous renown as the rich ex-Follies girl, twisted and untwisted her fingers in spasms of nervousness.

Fretfully she stepped back to her writing table and reread the telegram she had received a few minutes ago.

Typewritten on the yellowish sheet in the usual fashion was the message:

You may regret deeply the step you are about to take. The man you are to wed is unworthy of you. Try to postpone till you know details. MARTIN HEALY.

Alongside the telegram lay a number of morning papers in which was announced the news (fittingly adorned with her bewitching portrait) that she was to link her wealth and fame in matrimonial alliance with Chester Burton, sportsman, aviator and blue blood of Richmond, Va.

And Chester was due within ten minutes and her car and chauffeur were in readiness to drive them to City Hall.

The telegram had come to her like a draft of icy air. On this bright day in June it chilled her like a hovering ghost. She knew only too well that Martin Healy—her lawyer and financial adviser—was no practical joker.

Fingering the telegram she reviewed mentally her impetuous romance with Chester. She had met him two months ago at an exclusive casino just after she had broken with her childhood sweetheart, Ben Bradley, and was in the throes of gloom.

Gay Companion
Chester Was Debonair

Chester was gay and handsome and debonair and he beguiled her like a ray of laughter. There was a dashing air of romance in his make-up and he danced divinely. His merry spirit helped her to forget. Before the evening had been spent he had whispered his devotion to her.

She might have forgotten him as other flatterers who had preceded him. But Chester was persistent. He laid siege with flowers and theaters and long drives. His pursuit was steady and scintillating—like a charge of electricity.

And during that entire period no word nor sign from Ben to ease the old smart or cloud the brilliance of her new suitor.

At length she capitulated. She, who thought she had learned all about men and their hypocrisies from back-stage experiences, yielded to Chester's impassioned avowels. Thirsting for an old love, her heart opened like a parched flower. After two months of torrential wooing she answered "Yes."

And now the moment was at hand.

The telegram had strangely sobered her. After all what did she know of Chester Burton? He had told her he came from Richmond and had introduced her to a pleasant, silver-haired woman, whom he called mother. Was he wealthy? Well, he stayed at a swanky hotel. His interests? He was a sportsman and aviator. But she had never seen him enter a plane. And, now that she thought of it, could not remember him ever exhibiting any real knowledge of horses.

There came to her mind pictures of friends who had married in haste and wound up in Reno or Paris, pleading before a judge. She had never relished that idea much. But an inquisitive reporter had somehow learned of her impending nuptials, and she had confirmed it in person. It was too late to back out.

So she twisted and untwisted her hands in spasms of nervousness while she tried to think. She seized the phone and called the office of Martin Healy. Mr. Healy was out—he had gone to plead a case. Yes, he had sent her a telegram. No, they had no information and besides they'd rather not talk over the phone.

The chill grew in her heart. Was there a way out? She thought of pleading illness. But the excuse appeared too flimsy. Suddenly, it came to her.

She recollected having read recently of a law passed in the State of Connecticut requiring five days between the issuance of a license and the performance of the ceremony. Five days to think it over—to find out the truth . . .

Chester rang the bell and bounded in with a radiant smile.

"To Greenwich," replied Gladys.

Early the next morning Gladys motored straight to the office of Martin Healy. Her appearance presented the confused expression of dismay, disappointment, anger and self-humiliation. Her spirit was divided against itself—she felt she had done wrong to yield to suspicions and yet she could not down those same suspicions.

Her self-torments did not last long. Quickly she was ushered into the private sanctum of her lawyer. He greeted her with a smile which froze under her look.

"Read this," he said, and handed her a sheaf of papers.

The papers constituted the report of a leading detective agency on a man named Chester Burton. Her face flamed under her rouge as she read:

"Wed and divorced twice . . . No definite occupation . . . Born in Richmond, Va. . . . Parents dead . . . A society adventurer . . . no visible income . . . no record in trouble with authorities . . . harmless, braggart type . . . male gold digger . . ."

Bitter Blow
Chester Burton Found Out

Martin Healy stepped to her side. He poured her a glass of gin. "Don't take it so hard. After all he might have been worse. Supposing he had been a gunman?"

"Don't rub it in," Gladys sought to regain her composure.

"What shall I do now?"

"And now," added the lawyer as she finished dictating the telegram, "I'll have you confirmed it in person. It was too late to back out.

WIFE GETS NIGHT RIGHTS

Why, it's perfectly all right for a married woman to go out nights—providing her husband works then. So says Judge Arthur W. Dolan of Suffolk Probate Court. ## FAVOR PUTTING DOGS UNDER RESTRAINT

Resolution Adopted Asks for Curb to Last 90 Days From July 1

A resolution favoring restraining all dogs in Massachusetts for 90 days beginning July 1, to curb the spread of rabies, which has caused five deaths this year, was adopted by city and town officials at a meeting today at the state house.

There were 300 at the meeting, which was held in Gardner auditorium, and only a few dissenters when the resolution was offered by Dr. George H. Bigelow, public health commissioner.

The resolution reads:

"Resolved, that it is the sense of this meeting that in the interest of the life, health and happiness of the people, and the protection of dogs from rabies, all cities and towns adopt orders restraining all dogs for 90 days from July 1.

"And, resolved, that during this interval the responsible officials use all diligence to apprehend, and after a reasonable period to dispose of, all dogs now running at large, to the end that rabies may be eliminated from Massachusetts."

Byrd Brings Boston Summer Reminder of South Pole Expedition

WAITING FOR ANOTHER POLE TRIP

HERE'S THE FAMED POLAR SHIP

WHAT'S A ROPE OR TWO

Bostonians will have an opportunity during the next few weeks of inspecting the flagship of the fleet that Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd used on his exploration trip to the South Pole. The barkentine City of New York, in command of Capt. Bendik Johansen, sailed into Boston and is docked at the L st. bridge awaiting inspection by visitors. Capt. Johansen and two other members of the crew on the trip to the Antarctic are now aboard the ship

Rear-Admiral Richard E. Byrd's Antarctic barkentine "City of New York" was today opened for public inspection at the L st. bridge, South Boston.

This location was decided upon after the Metropolitan District Commission had denied permission to tie up the famous ship in the lower Charles River Basin.

William E. Whittaker, secretary of the commission, stated that the commercial aspect of the vessel's stay was the reason for denying permission to anchor the boat in the basin.

Aboard the famous ship are Capt. Bendik Johansen, who served as chief officer and ice pilot under Byrd, Alan Innes Taylor, dog driver, and Lloyd K. Grelnie, radio operator.

Three Eskimo puppies, being raised by Innes Taylor, are one of the many attractions aboard the vessel.

It is planned to keep the ship at the South Boston pier for about a month, with visitors welcome daily and Sunday.

Now for the next figure. No ruler this time, either. The only time you'll need that ruler is when you draw margins around your drawings.

You have all you need to make a simple picture now. Just put the triangular figure on top of the block, sketch in a window or so, draw in the circle again, and you have a house, with the sun shining brightly upon it.

Keep every drawing you make. Do not bind, fold or roll them.

WIFE FIGHTS TO CLEAR NAME

White Plains, N. Y., June 25 (AP)—An opportunity completely to vindicate Mrs. Norma Jones Edwards of the charges of misconduct made against her in a counterquit for divorce by William H. (Big Bill) Edwards, former collector of internal revenue at New York, was asked today by her counsel.

Alfred M. Ottley, counsel for Mrs. Edwards, refused to make a motion for dismissal of the counterquit which Supreme Court Justice Wilcher said yesterday he would entertain and the trial was set for October 5.

District Attorney Frank H. Coyne said he had not received the affidavit of Thomas Wentzlow and Frank Passo, a chauffeur, which were submitted in support of Edwards' charges against his wife. Counsel for Mrs. Edwards charged the men with perjury.

WOMEN FINED IN DRUNK CASE

Miss Lillian Donovan, 31, of Audubon rd., and Miss Julia Riley, 26, of Temple st., Roxbury, today pleaded nolo to charges of drunkenness and were fined $5 each in Quincy court.

A male companion, Morris Cohen of Nantasket, pleaded not guilty and will face charges of drunkenness and drunken operating on June 29.

The trio were arrested by Wollaston police after, it is charged, a car operated by Cohen drove through Weymouth streets in an erratic manner and finally collided with a curbing.

LEE SPEAKS TO CREDIT MEN

"Few will disagree with me when I express the view that the pending application for increased freight rates far transcends in importance any other internal economic issue before the country today," said Elisha Lee, vice president of the Pennsylvania Railroad at the convention of the National Association of Credit Men today.

Lee further said the application was presented as an emergency measure to meet emergency conditions. The application makes no pretense to deal fundamentally with the perplexities and problems in which the railroads are enmeshed, he said.

MAYOR TO SPEAK AT DEDICATION

"Failure to enforce the dog license laws is a disgrace to the State," said Evan Richardson, director of the division of animal industry. "In some towns one-third to one-half of the dogs are unlicensed."

Instructions for capturing dogs that have bitten persons and methods of restraining and segregating them while watching for the development of rabies, were given by Dr. W. A. Young, veterinary of the Animal Rescue League of Boston.

Boston and other New England cities and towns are brought 24 hours nearer the southern fruit orchards and vegetable gardens by a new service inaugurated this week by the Pennsylvania railroad, it was announced today.

A new fast freight leaves the Potomac yards at Washington at 4:30 a. m. daily and arrives at Boston at 3 a. m. the next morning. This makes possible "next morning delivery" at New Haven, Providence, Boston and other points on the New Haven railroad, and second morning delivery at Portland. Fast service between Southern New England points and Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Indianapolis was inaugurated earlier this month in both directions.

Heavy Toll in Health Exacted of Artists

Radio Realm Reveals Sad Phases in Lives of Performers

Trouper spirit is in the blood of radio folk to an equal, if not greater degree than ever to be demonstrated before footlights. "Laugh, Clown, Laugh" and "The Show Must Go On" are old adages in the world of entertainment. Living up to these unwritten laws and holding to the performers' solemn creed is often a doubly cold, be it in the realm of sawdust and side shows, or within radios soundproof walls.

"What would happen," inquires an ear cupper, "if either Amos or Andy were stricken ill?" One of them has been ill, according to the information in hand. It may surprise many listeners to learn that Amos (Freeman Gosden) has done his comedy bit more than once from a sick bed, over a special line Furthermore, on another occasion this dynamic radio personality carried on alone. It was when Andy (Charles Correll) attended the funeral of his mother, some distance from Chicago. Ever since then, Andy has always wanted to repay Amos for that demonstration. No wonder they're pals.

More Martyrs . . . .

Sometimes the urge that makes sick people work is carried far beyond the bounds of all reason. When the price is too great, a little of "the show must not go on" attitude would serve to retain no small measure of health and very often salvage life itself. Who recalls the story of Moe Rich? Moe was a violinist. Though overworked and ill, he would not obey doctor's orders and quit. Not so long ago he collapsed at WEAF in New York and an hour later was dead. Moe was the brother of Freddy Rich, popular leader and man.

A substitute went in—the show went on, with the public none the wiser; therefore, no more appreciative. Then there was J. Loprirre, another musician who toiled tirelessly with a string quartet for NBC. He, too, ignored medical advice to his sorrow. A breakdown followed and he died, seated before his radio set at home, listening to the man who had taken his place.

Still They Carry On . . . .

Alonzo Dean Cole, author and actor, came to the WOR studios in Newark just the other night to work. He had been in bed all day with a temperature of 103. They had to hold him up, and before the last lines in his "Witch Tales" program was concluded, he was carried out in an unconscious delirium—yet nary a listener knew! Nat Brusiloff led his band all last week with a fever of 102. He is now awaiting an operation. Lillian Buckman, CBS soprano, fainted between verses of a selection recently, and her unsung lines were picked up by an understudy close at hand. It has been only a very few days since Dale Wimbrow, in mortal agony from lumbago, took his microphone turn at WABC so as to complete a week's effort put forth in preparation for his program.

Mrs. Arthur Nichols, sound effects boss for CBS, wends through with her work, although her husband had just dropped dead. She herself was hysterical with grief. As sad as any fiction was the case of Joe Campbell, trombonist, who received a wire while broadcasting, bearing word that his mother was near death in Denver. By special permission, Joe hastened to the "smoke" to play for her. High hope inspired him. He didn't know she had already passed away.

Irony of Fate . . . .

True enough, these things overtake men and women in all walks of life. Yet, somehow, it appears especially sad when one stops to consider the tremendous effort these radio people make to lighten our spirits. There is always the possibility of tears streaming down cheeks from behind which emerges a voice that is heard to laugh and sing because "the show must go on."

TALLULAH BANKHEAD AND FREDRIC MARCH HEAD 'MY SIN' CAST

Melville Douglas Given Leading Role Opposite Gloria Swanson

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc

Hollywood, June 25—Paramount certainly tacks some hectic titles on its new star, Tallulah Bankhead. Tallulah's first was "Tarnished Lady," and now she's to do a yarn called "My Sin."

Harriet Parsons

"Tarnished Lady" left much to be desired, but it proved one thing—that the rich-voiced Bankhead is a great personality and powerful actress. Given the breaks handed to Marlene Dietrich, she'll step right up alongside the German sensation as a box office natural. But you'll have to give the gal a better setup than in "Tarnished Lady," Paramount.

Except for the title, "My Sin" sounds promising. It's an original by Owen Davis and Adelaide Heilbron. George Abbott, who has a remarkable sense of dramatic values, will direct. And Fredric March will split the starring burden with Bankhead.

Sounds like an ace break for both Tallulah and Freddie. They should be great together. Scott Kolk is the only other player signed to date.

Melville Douglas is definitely set for the lead opposite Gloria Swanson in "Tonight or Never," the Lily Hatvani story which Mervyn (ex-star final) Leroy will direct. Following "Tonight or Never," Gloria will do an original by Francis Faragoh. Sam Goldwyn is renting the writer from Universal on the installment plan for the purpose. Like to see Gloria do some more of the mad comedy she handled so well in "Indiscreet," or some of the vital drama that characterized the "Trespasser." But please, oh please, let's not have her wax coy again. That telephone sequence in "Indiscreet" made me blush for her.

Sue Carol Gets Break at Last

Maybe Universal can give Sue Carol her long-awaited break. Sue started out in great shape under the Fox banner, but somehow Fox lost interest in her before her contract came to an end. Some said it was because her secret marriage to Nick Stuart upset studio officials. Then Radio signed her and predicted great things for her future. That, too, fell through. Altogether things have been pretty difficult lately for Sue, who created a sensation when she first came into pictures. Now, however, she is to have the lead opposite Regis Toomey in "Graft," the Universal newspaper yarn. Willard Robertson has been signed to play the city editor in "Graft."

Latest bulletin on Lupe Velez: Mexico's gift to the shatter workers is creating such a sensation on her vaudeville tour that her salary has been raised and her engagement (theatrical not matrimonial) extended. Lupe's husband, Johnny Weissmuller, is talking into the mike at openings, but has been knocking them dead. If her imitation is any funnier than the original she's a genius. There's been a feeling lately that elaborate film premieres are on their way out. But I doubt it—they're too much a part of the magic ballyhoo which has transmuted Hollywood's canned product into a world-wide panacea for heartaches. Speaking of Lupe, Paramount is wondering just where that modern Marco Polo, Gary Cooper, is at present. Latest report rumors him in Mussolini's native land.

Heard and overheard about town: Eli Brendel, synthetic Swede comedian, borrowed from Fox for "West of Broadway," Gilbert's next for M. G. M. Rill Powell getting those bridegroom jitters over his marriage to Carole Lombard Friday. They will leave for Honolulu Saturday and after that I'll have to get my reports on their behavior from L. O. P. Harold Ross, editor of the New Yorker, refreshing his sense of humor by studying Billy Rose's chinyocranius Jetta Goudal flashing a stunning diamond clasp sent her from France by the Thalbergs, whose beach house she is decorating.

Attention, you football fans! (and who isn't?) Universal has signed the original four horsemen of Notre Dame for that's football epic, "The Spirit of Notre Dame." This is the picture the late Knute Rockne was to have a hand in. The boys who make up the famous quartet which spelled victory for Notre Dame in '22, '23 and '24 are Harry Stuhldreher, Elmer Layden, James Crowley and Don Miller. Moon Mullins, one of last season's greatest gridiron stars, and John O'Brien, Rockne's assistant, have also been lined up by Universal.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: PRINCE AND PRINCESS MDIVANI (Mae Murray, the oil well queen), the LOWELL SHERMANS (Helene Costello) and ROSCOE ARBUCKLE at George Olsen's night club. JACK WHITE (Pauline Starke ex) with BLANCHE MEHAFFEY at the same place. JACK and BLANCHE are stepping out together lately. DON DILLOWAY down with his third case of ptomaine this month and Fox hoping to hold "Skyline" until he is well. SYLVIA SIDNEY, attractive in white dress and beret, a contrast to her sombre brunette beauty, lunching at the Brown Derby. EDDIE ROBINSON and LEW CODY also at HERB SOMBORN'S hostelry. CODY who has made eight pictures in rapid succession, planning to leave for Europe within the week. WILL ROGERS, JR., preparing to enter Stanford University this fall. PERCY WESTMORE, make-up wiz, doping out a slinky coiffure for KAY FRANCIS. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Exeter Theater

Robert Montgomery and Ernest Torrence in "Shipmates," and Ramon Novarro in "Daybreak" are the attractions at the Exeter for the remainder of the week.

DAINTY STARS OF FILMDOM TO GRACE BOSTON SCREENS

Conchita Montenegro comes to the Loew's State screen tomorrow in "Never the Twain Shall Meet," in which she appears as a little siren of the South Sea Islands.

Star's Wife in Film at Uptown

Mrs. Edward G. Robinson, wife of the star of "Smart Money," opening at the Olympia and Uptown tomorrow, is a brunette with a sense of humor. That is why she insisted on having her in the picture which presents the celebrated Little Caesar as a gambling fool who is perpetually in pursuit of all sorts of conditions of blondes. She appears rather fleetingly as a cigarette counter clerk.

"It was an especially bitter pill," says the dark and comely Gladis Lloyd Robinson, "because Edward, in pursuit of his screen affinities treated me with scorn, which was hard to tolerate even on the screen.

"My husband has been hoping that he would be cast in something else than a thug; I joined with him in that desire—and now look at me! I didn't mind his feminine fans all over the country writing to him, telling him how dearly they loved a brutal—how magnificently he swaggered, slugged, gatted, or wielded a blackjack. They couldn't get at him. But in 'Smart Money,' the ladies can get at him—and he seems to like it. Blondes, blondes!

THE MAN QUESTION—FORGIVE HIM BEFOREHAND

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE ONLY sure way of being happy with a man is to forgive him for every little sin you can possibly think of, before he begins committing them.

HELEN ROWLAND.

A born diplomat is a man who can call a two-hundred-pound woman "Cutie," and get away with it.

The hangover of love's intoxication leaves most people wanting to die; but as soon as the headache and the heartache subsides, they begin to look around for an antidote—or another stimulant.

Many a modern man spends his youth paying the installments on the engagement ring and the furniture, his middle life keeping up the payments on the insurance, and the rest of his days paying the alimony.

Falling out of love is like hearing the alarm-clock in the middle of a beautiful dream—and as painful as coming out of the anaesthetic after an operation.

The most successful woman in the world is not always the one who is the most brilliant, efficient and beautiful, but the one who has succeeded in finding the right husband and in making him THINK that she is the most brilliant, efficient and beautiful woman on earth.

A sophisticate is a person, who feels that he must act bored, unless the play leaves a sour taste in the mouth and shatters a few ideals.

Causes for Divorces at Reno

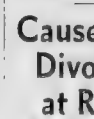
By WINIFRED BLACK.

SIXTY DIVORCES on the first day of the new six weeks' divorce law in Reno, Nev.—um.

There's a record for you—eh, what?



Winifred Black

I wonder what the first divorce was for and who brought the action, the husband or the wife.

How long were they married anyhow, poor things, and who was it first started them to thinking of divorce?

The "Other Woman"?

The "Other Man"?

I know a woman who says she never thought of a divorce till she heard two women wondering what on earth she saw in that fool of a husband of hers. The woman I know was no longer in love with her husband. She knew he was a fool—and she didn't like fools. But she thought nobody else knew it, so she just endured him—for pride's sake.

But when she got her divorce she married again.

And was the second husband a clever man or at any rate a sensible one who would never be called a fool by anyone, anywhere, any time?

No, my dear, he was not.

He was a bigger fool than the first husband—and there you are.

Why not?

After all a taste in husbands is apt to be like a taste in hats.

I know a woman who cannot select anything but an absolutely hideous hat.

She has money, she has brains, she dresses very well in every other way, but when it comes to hats—

And as it is with husbands, have you ever noticed it?

The woman who divorces one husband is quite apt to rise from the frying pan into the fire.

If she married a brute, to begin with, wouldn't you think she would choose a gentle, kindly, forebearing soul, for her next husband?

And if you had you would expect a woman who divorced a husband because he was brutal, to look around and find another brute" to remarry.

The truth is the matter is, she likes 'em brutal.

She doesn't know it perhaps—but she does—or she wouldn't keep on marrying them, would she?

Sixty divorces the first day of the new divorce law in Reno. Five years, from the date of that first day I wonder how many of the men and women who went to court to get free will be glad that they did it?

Cotton Has Captured Fashion

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, June 25—The way in which we have all returned to cotton is remarkable. Cotton fabrics seem to be what every one has been waiting for, judging by the frequency with which they are observed as part of the mode at so many different occasions and times. But we are wearing cotton frocks for sports street, formal and informal afternoon wear and at night.

A colored success has been scored by organdy, for the lovely fabric is easily one of the high lights of this season. For formal and informal evening frocks it is unsurpassed just now. Its fresh, crisp, youthful look makes it stand out against a background of lame, satin, chiffon and other popular evening stuffs. Its engaging air of simplicity has given way to a degree of sophistication that is most delightful, and as it may be worn this season by the most mature woman as well as debutante. Organdy for after noon clothes, too, is important here and many of the leading houses have used it in plain and embroidered versions for some of their prettiest models.

Lucile uses embroidered organdy for the summer ensemble here sketched. The color is a delightful cool shade of green with white dots. White organdy makes the short-sleeved underblouse the fichu and the pipings bordering the scallops. A three-tiered underskirt peeps out in front between the open side pieces of the skirt proper. ## No Waste Love, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am writing you in regard to the letter of "Steve S." It just proves what inconsiderate creatures most men are. Hasn't a girl a right to break an engagement if she finds she no longer is in love with the man? Steve S., I think you are very lucky man. Marriage is no blessing after love has ceased. The idea of insinuating that two years spent in the company of a girl you love are wasted! Apparently you didn't love any more than she loved.

Two years ago I had the same sad experience. The man I promised to marry told me he no longer loved me. I do not feel that my love was wasted—it is the most beautiful thing in my life, and I shall always look back on it without bitterness. I shall always wish him happiness—if he is happy, I am happy. What do you think?

A. G. L.

Dear A. G. L.: I think that you are very fortunate to have such a philosophy of love my dear A. G. L., and I hope that the future holds much happiness in store for you. No, I do not think that love is ever wasted—it enriches every life it touches.

Thoughtlessness

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I go with a man 8 years older than I. We have an "understanding" and as soon as my sister has a position, we are planning to be married. He was called away on a business trip to zone about six weeks. Don't you think that during this time he might send me a box of candy, a new magazine or something? He knows we can't afford amusements. It is not that he cannot afford it; I think that it is plainly a case of not being thoughtful.

LEE.

Dear Lee: I believe it is lack of thought, rather than lack of heart which prevents your fiance from giving you little attentions when he is in another city.

USE PLENTY OF COOLING FRUIT

By MARTHA LEE

WHEN WE said good-bye to spring and hello to summer on June 21, we really officially opened the summer season, and now's the time to talk about the interesting occupation of keeping cool.

The easiest way of producing food a real ice cool is to use fruit generously, naturally and ice less we can't do better than to prepare the cooler we will keep meals.

Calories of course produce not only fat but heat, but we must take some starchy foods to give it pep for going places and doing things and vitamins we must have always with us. Which brings us to a simple rule for summer eating—cut down on calories and load up on vitamins! And it's accomplished in the fruitier-wood fruit! Popular, economical, and healthful in vitamins.

Right Feeding Health Basis for Baby

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

HOW TO feed the baby is a common and difficult problem for the young mother. She must decide whether to nurse the child or feed it artificially.

No mother should decide this important question without the advice of her physician. This decision is of utmost importance. It may determine the future health and the success or failure of the child.

Dr. Copeland

Mother's milk is the natural and ideal food for the infant. Because of this, every mother should nurse her infant, unless there are definite reasons opposing.

There is no other milk comparable to mothers milk. Great advances have been made in the successful preparation of artificial foods for infants. But, perfect as they are, they are never equal to the natural food.

It is true that many bottle-fed children have grown up to be sturdy and healthy individuals. But is is also true that the percentage of childhood diseases is far greater in formula-fed infants.

However, there are definite reasons why some children should not be nursed by mothers. A mother who has tuberculosis, or who is suspected of having tuberculosis, should not nurse her infant. If she should nurse her baby, her own condition is sure to be made worse, and the infant is exposed to the infection.

Where the mother must submit to an operation, or suffers from any condition in which mother blood is lost she should not attempt to nurse the child. The quality of the milk is lowered by such experiences.

Since mother's milk is the most perfect food for the infant, weaning should not be hastened. I am sure you will not give up nursing your infant because of any selfish reason. You will be amply repaid for your sacrifice by the growth and development of a wonderful child. The infant should be nursed until it is eight or nine months old.

The Beauty Box

GIRLS WHO fare forth into the busy mart and bring home the bacon find good looks an asset, but they must consider that there are different ways of being good-looking. A superintendent of employment in a large department store says that he likes the kind of beauty that suggests intelligence, a pleasant smile that is the outcome of good nature and amiability, clear eyes which typify quickness of thought, an erect carriage that is natural to a highly-energized young woman. There you are!

Thanks Are Due on Receiving Kind Words

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it good form to say "Thank you" when a person pays you a personal compliment? For example, if a person tells you they think you are very nice looking, would "Thank you" be an appropriate reply?

E. O.

Yes, we should offer thanks for any pleasant comment a person makes to us. Something like this: "Thank you. It is kind of you to say so," or "Thank you. It makes me very happy that you like my dress."

Impolite to Omit Her

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am planning to have a luncheon to announce the engagement of my sister and I would like to know whether her fiance's mother should be invited?

(We hope you will continue writing your splendid column for a long time to come. We enjoy reading it so much and have found it very helpful.)

MISS V. V.

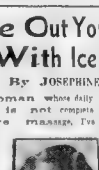
Freeze Out Your Frown Lines With Ice Massage

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

FOR THE woman whose daily beauty routine is not complete without an ice massage, I've worked out a splendid treatment which I believe you will find equally as refreshing and invigorating as a three hour's sleep. You know I always caution you about wrapping ice in gauze before its massage over the face and throat, because the temperature of the ice on the skin might, if one is unused to it, prove a bit harsh or drying.



Josephine Huddleston

But there are a few simple rules which we may follow and thus be assured of suffering absolutely no ill effects from the application of ice in the name of beauty.

To begin the ice massage the skin must be thoroughly cleansed because the ice, acting as an astringent, will cause any impurity to become embedded in the pores. Once the skin is cleansed a skin tonic should be patted over the face and throat, and when dry a pad of cotton should be rubbed upward and outward over the skin, then a liberal application of pure nourishing cream should be smoothed over the cleansed area.

Be sure the ice is smooth, as sharp edges may irritate the skin. Beginning low on the chest work upward movement of th ice until the throat has been massaged. Then, beginning at the point of the chin, rub the ice gently up to the lobe of the ear, bring the ice back to the point of the chin and work up to the side of the ear, then back to the ear and up to the temples. Continue on each cheek in the same manner.

To smooth out frown lines, begin at the eyebrow and run the ice up to the hairline, continuing to work the ice from the brows to the hairline. Go over the forehead. The area around the eyes should have a more liberal covering of cream than the rest of the skin and, beginning on the upper lid and close to the nose, run the ice out to the temples, press for a fraction of a second, draw the ice back under the eye towards the nose. Circle each eye in this manner 28 times.

The ice massage may be used not more than once each day, and at the first sign of wrinkled eyelids or lines at the corners of the eyes, get busy with the cream application and ice massage, for ice is one of the few astringents that may safely be used on the lids and surrounding area.

Ice held at the nape of the neck while quickly counting five also will prove most stimulating, and is excellent when followed by the ice massage over the face and throat.

GOVERNMENT IS AGAIN 'FRIEND TO BUSINESS'

By FRANK H. MELDON

Wall and State St. leaders see in the renewal of broadcasting and communications licenses of Radio Corp. by the Federal Radio Commission new evidence that the Government is a "friend to business." They believe it will end all its power to nurse along improvement. Special enthusiasm was due to the fact that the decision not to have recourse to the courts in connection with radio licenses came rather closely on the heels of withdrawal from litigation over the Vacuum Sooony merger.

* * *

In both instances, of course, the possibility existed that the federal authorities concerned believed they were acting in line with justice. If this was the case, it would give Wall and State Sts. a much more reason for cheer.

* * *

dissipated when American Ice Co. of which Charles C Small is president, declared its regular dividend on the old-time Seavish rumor had said the dividend would be reduced. President Small started learning the ice business at the rear end of an old-time ice wagon when he was a boy in Kennebunkport, Me. Boston Ice Co. is a subsidiary of American Ice. Mr Small still manages to get back to the Pine Tree State annually for his summer vacation.

* * *

A news dispatch, telling of the advancement of New England plans to boom the tourist industry, says there is to be a large development of the White Mountain region as "the Switzerland of America." It was on the golf links of the York Country Club at York Harbor, Me., years ago, that we first met the originator of this title for the White Mountain area. It was Mark Twain (Samuel Clemens), and he was playing a round with the famous William Dean Howells, "Dean of American Literature." Both had traveled extensively in Europe and agreed that the White Mountain in their opinion, in many respects excelled the mountains of Switzerland.

Some of the thousands of New Englanders with a financial stake in American railroads should soon begin to wonder when the Interstate Commerce Commission is going to allow them that "fair return" on it it is supposed to secure for them.

It is to be doubted if the railroads will add greatly to their revenues by the plan for "checking" automobiles somewhat after the fashion of baggage. The plan is thought likely in State Street circles to prove just another one of the many conveniences the railways are offering the public these days. It will at least provide a way of getting around some of the delays which authorities appear to think it is most timely to create about when the highway travel season is around its summer peak.

In a neighboring state we read a newspaper article to the effect that automobiles had relieved unemployment by letting out a highway contract. The contract, it was found on investigation, to an out-of-the-state firm, which employed no local men on the job. The unemployed painters in one town complained of unemployment but when a big block was torn down automobile state contractors won the job and a contract to build a big municipal building also went across the state line.

It begins to look as if some people had settled themselves back and waited for President Hoover to do someone else to bring them work.

"Other rumors enhancing bullish feeling of the speculative community include report that South American countries would be granted similar one-year "debt holiday" to that advocated for the European debtors. The report that the Administration would change its prohibition policy was denied today but there was very widespread rumor that announcement would be made in Washington soon favoring change in the law that would legalize 4 per cent beer."

Local trade circles hear a further advance of 4 cents per pound to nine cents a pound tomorrow.

Central of Jersey Omits Its $2 Extra

New York, June 25 (AP)—Central Railroad of New Jersey announced that in view of the present conditions it has been decided to omit the usual semi-annual extra dividend of $2, usually paid July 15. The regular quarterly dividend of $2 was declared, payable Aug. 15.

Bar Silver Is Up

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Copper held leadership during the new advance registered in today's stock market. Inspiration for buying and real status was inspired both by the further rise in metal prices and by the action of Anaconda in deciding to declare the regular quarterly dividend. Profit taking eventually erased many gains.

Dividend Has Been Cut Three Times

Anaconda's dividend was reduced to its present level of 37½ cents quarterly from 62½ cents a share on March 26. That was the third cut since the second quarter of 1930 when the stock was paying $1.75 quarterly.

Steel and "Can" Move in Company

U. S. Steel and American Can today moved in company during uptrend spurts. When Steel carried its new advance to 101¾, up 1¾ from yesterday's close American Can gained a point at 111¾. Within the month, on sliding prices, the two issues have sold at the same prices at the same time.

Chrysler Wins Fresh Buying

Chrysler soon gained a point in today's trading winning free buying as a result of the statement by the management to enter the low-priced "four" field. The stock is up more than 10 points from its recent low.

Copper and Cotton Commodity Leaders

Copper and cotton were the commodity leaders today. Cotton a new advance of a dollar brought the May 1972, position to 11 cents a pound, with July selling at 9.85 cents, October at 10.26 and January at 10.62 cents a pound. Copper metal was bid at 8¾ cents a pound, with only a limited supply available at this price. Corn sold up fractionally.

Cigarette Companies' Act Is Spectacular

Spectacular contribution to the improved sentiment was the action of the big cigarette manufacturing companies in advancing their prices 35 cents a set, per thousand. This advance is calculated to produce an additional $45,000,000 to the annual revenues of the cigarette companies. Naturally the shares made spectacular response to the news. Suggestion the government might become interested in a profitable industry's sudden decision advancing prices was ignored in the general optimism.

Auto Companies' Earnings Outlook

When discussions are heard regarding the prospects of second quarter earnings it is evident that many anticipate a much better comparative showing from the automobile companies than from other industries. However there is a possibility of smaller earnings for the motor concerns during mid summer. Exceptions may be the companies which will bring out new models which are expected to attract public favor because of low prices, etc.

National Cash Register's Dividend

The general belief in responsible quarters is that earnings of National Cash Register showed substantial improvement in the second quarter over the first three months. Because of this fact there is reason to believe that the $3 a share dividend on the A stock will be resumed at the September meeting of the board. The stock is cumulative, and it is argued that directors will desire to resume payments as soon as justified by earnings and the outlook.

38,300 Shares in Single Transaction

The largest amount of stock to change hands in a single transaction for the New York Stock Exchange for many months was a block of 38,300 shares of Mo-Kenzon & Robbins, which appeared on the tape at an opening price of $8 a share today, advance of half a point over the previous closing level.

It was learned that the mark, which had been hanging over the market for some time, was purchased in one block by interests closely identified with the management of the company.

Coca-Cola's Net Still Improves

Coca-Cola is one of the companies which has passed through the second quarter's operating period without material effect on earnings. Because of lower costs for some raw materials, the company has been able to record continued improvement in net. Estimates now are that 1931, while virtually the same as 1930, will find earnings somewhat in excess of the $11.15 a share reported for 1930.

FRESH ADVANCE CANCELLED BY NEW SELLING

Extensive profit taking and fresh bear pressure in the late trading cancelled much of an advance of 2 to more than 7 points in principal shares, and at the finish there were numerous losses of 1 to 3 points.

Trading slackened somewhat, and the day's turnover was about four million shares, or roughly a million less than yesterday's.

CLOSING IS HEAVY.

The rapidity of the advance had invited a technical setback, and the downturn was accompanied by exciting rumors on the floor of the exchange, one to the effect that the French cabinet had resigned.

Apparently a strong feature early in the day was the extensive list of 3 points. Case, after pushing up nearly 7, closed but slightly higher.

Net losses at a point or more appeared in several of the principal shares, including American Can, International Telephone, General Electric, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Radio.

The stock market was kept boiling as further advances in non-ferrous metal prices, announcement of a $100,000,000 credit to the Reichsbank and the visit of Secretary Mellon to Paris, supplied fresh fuel to the fires of bullishness.

Copper shares led a feverish upturn when engineered most of the night. Occasional waves of profit taking swept through the market, and this early behavior was somewhat confusedly at times, but Wall Street's reborn optimism was well maintained.

Anaconda pushed up 3 points in enthusiastic buying, as directors maintained the $1.50 annual dividend rate. Calumet & Arizona and National Lead made similar gains and Kennecott, Phelps Dodge and Cerro de Pasco pushed up atheltically.

RAILS ARE CONFUSED.

The railroad stocks reflected some confusion over the reply to the Interstate Commerce Commission's request for further information regarding the proposed 15 per cent freight rate increase. The carriers' explanation that it is not proposed to make any specific exceptions on any commodities was construed as interpreted in Wall Street as a move to get action without the delay which would be necessitated by going over the rate structure in detail at this time.

If a horizontal increase is agreed upon, specific reductions in rates on articles in which there is considerable competition from other methods of transportation could be taken up later.

Although Anaconda's dividend was a pleasant surprise, there was no lack of adverse dividend news. The troubles of the paper industry were reflected in Abitibi Paper and Power's omission of its $ per cent preferred dividend and in International Paper and Power's postponement of action on its payments on its $ and 7 per cent preferred issues, and those of its subsidiary U. S. Industrial Alcohol passed its common dividend.

Copper prices were put up another ¼ of a cent, to 8¾ cents a pound, and Anaconda, Kennecott and Phelps Dodge each advanced 3 points.

Zinc was boosted ¼ of a cent, to 4¼ cents a pound, and Am. Zinc, Lead & Smelting and New Jersey Zinc each moved up 1 point.

Curb Rise Ended by Profit-Taking

New York, June 25—Active profit taking lined up on the New York curb market today, cancelling most of an early gain and putting many representative shares somewhat under the previous close. Utilities, which had followed the morning upturn, were affected most.

Electric Bond & Share, United Light "A" and Brazilian traction were off about a point each. Advances of 1 to 3 in the oils were cut...

$5,000,000 Power Flotation Planned

Among new issues scheduled to come on the security market within the next few days are $5,000,000 first mortgage 4½ per cent gold bonds, series due 1961, of the Wisconsin-Michigan Power Company, which will be offered by a banking group comprised of Harris, Forbes & Co., Inc., First Wisconsin Company and Spencer Trask & Co.

Lily-Tulip Cup's Earnings Increase

Lily-Tulip Cup Corp. reports for five months ended May 31 net profit of $354,839 after depreciation federal taxes, etc., equal, after dividend requirements on the 4 per cent preferred, to $1.82 a share on the 139,900 no-par common shares, against $1.50, or $1.74 a share, on 143,000 common shares in the like period in 1930.

Grains Are Mixed in Chicago Market

Chicago, June 25—Grains finished mixed today. Wheat closed unsettled, ⅞-1⅛ cents lower, corn ½ off to ⅛ up, oats unchanged to ⅛-⅜ advance, and provisions 15 to 30 cents down.

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Busy Times Ahead. ↑ Sharkey Vs. Walker.
Full Sports Menu. | Deglane Vs. George.
Charity Offerings. ↓ London Vs. Steele.

Bangtails Will Giddap at Rockingham

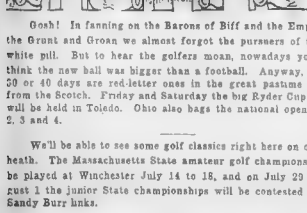
Gotham fans are all steamed up over next Monday night's big wrestling match between Jim Londos and Ray Steele in aid of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund New England wrestling enthusiasts are in for an even bigger treat, for the greatest grappling carnival ever staged in the little old U. S. A. is going to be put on here on July 28 in aid of the Christmas Basket and allied funds of the Boston Evening American. It will be preceded by almost as big a one on July 14. The first of the big wrestling treats on this sector of the Grunt and Groan front is the Henri DeGlane vs. Ed George duel, under the auspices of the Crossacup Pischon Post of the American Legion on July 14 Two weeks later the winner of that tussle will meet Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg for the championship of the universe, and part of the proceeds will be donated to the allied charities of this great newspaper.

What a series of sporting events are being launched. On the same night Londos and Steele meet for the Milk Fund in New York, Sammy Fuller, former New England lightweight champion, boxes Steve Halaiko at Braves Field. Jack Thompson, world's welterweight champion, was to have met Lou Brouillard, New England welterweight and middleweight champion, at the Boston Garden, the next night, but the match was postponed, today, when word was received from Chicago, Thompson was down with the ptomaine poison. Jack will be held to his contract. He cannot box elsewhere until he goes through his match with Brouillard here. Brouillard seems headed for the fistic heights. If he isn't qualified to step into the vacant world's middleweight championship shoes, we don't know who is.

On the eve of the glorious Fourth Herr ("Squawk") Schmeling, from Sauerkrautville on the Wuerstburger, heavyweight champion Uber Alles, will defend the world's bauble against Willie the Clutch Stribling, King of the Canebreaks, in Cleveland's great, big, new pudd'n dish of an arena out there on the shores of Lake Erie.

The night after Max the Squawk and Willie the Clutch refight the Battle of Lake Erie, Paolino Uzcudun and Max Baer will have it out in an old-fashioned 20-round or less bout under the auspices of Jack Dempsey ont in Reno, where the ghost of Jim Jeffries was chastised by Jack Johnson and where many a spouse and hubby were given the bum's rush. Jack Dampsey, Jack Dampsey—seems we heard the name somewhere before? Oh, yes, he's Estelle Taylor's worse half. Jack is combining business with pleasure ont there in the sage brush metropolis. He's untackling himself from Estelle and getting a piece of change (perhaps) from a fight without having to put up his dukes himself.

Saddled in between the DeGlane vs. George and the Winner vs. Sonnenberg big charity wrestling match is the fistic piece de resistance of the season, the 15-round duel between Jack Sharkey, the world's greatest heavyweight, even if Herr Schmeling did squawk himself into the title, and Smiling Mickey Walker, former world's middleweight and light heavyweight champion. The two kings of the hempen square will battle in aid of their own exchequers and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund.



Gosh! In fanning on the Barons of Biff and the Emperors of the Grunt and Groan we almost forgot the pursuers of the little white pill. But to hear the golfers moan, nowadays you would think the new ball was bigger than a football. Anyway, the next 30 or 40 days are red-letter ones in the great pastime we stole from the Scotch. Friday and Saturday the big Ryder Cup matches will be held in Toledo. Ohio also bags the national open on July 2, 3 and 4.

We'll be able to see some golf classics right here on our home heath. The Massachusetts State amateur golf championships will be played at Winchester July 14 to 18, and on July 23 and August 1 the junior State championships will be contested over the Sandy Burr links.

Toss in the national track and field championships, which will be held in Lincoln, Neb., over the Fourth, and the national swimming championships, a flock of tennis events, and the regularly scheduled baseball games in tightening-up races in both leagues and it is easy to see that the remaining days in June and torrid July will furnish enough excitement to prevent us sports fans from getting the ennui. No wonder the plaint of the chorusing sporting editors: "Where are we goin' to put 'em all?"

There was a time when sports events got a paragraph or so,
Unheard of then were prize fight tales that tell you blow by blow.
Or detail yarns of baseball games, that give you play by play
How Beaves scalped Giants and Pirates bold, or Babe Ruth saved the day
By poling homer o'er the wall or into the grandstand,
But better space for good, clean sport than tales of gangland strife
And suicides, sex dirt, scandals, crime, the scum and sins of life.
Sometimes I think when I read tales of sinners large and small

Mack and Buckley Victims of Carnera Phone Hoax

Capt. Thomas Bligh of the State police reported to the Boxing Commission today that the two telegrams sent to Leon See telling him that his exhibition bout at Braves Field on last Monday night was off were sent over the telephone to the main office of the Western Union.

Capt. Bligh declared that the telegram which purported to be signed by Eddie Mack of the Argonne Club was charged to Liberty 2176, which is the telephone number of the Argonne Club.

The telegram signed "Eugene [illegible] Buckley, Massachusetts Boxing Commission," was charged to Haymarket 4800, which is the telephone number of the State House.

The wording of the two telegrams is such that the State police believe they were sent by somebody well versed in the technicalities of the boxing game.

The police are still working on the case and hope to identify the sender of the two fake telegrams.

DEGLANE DEFIES CONTENDERS FOR MAT TITLE

By HENRI DeGLANE
(As told to Jack Conway)

It is a popular thing for a new champion to say that he intends to give all comers of recognized ability a chance to lift the title.

After making such a statement, the average present-day champion immediately puts his precious title in a glass case and refuses to give anybody of standing a chance to win it.

When I defeated Strangler Lewis at Montreal, I agreed to clash with all-comers. I intend to keep my promise.

Joe Malcewicz had won 24 straight bouts, and was regarded in many places as the best wrestler in the world. This is why I took him on.

Ever since I won from Lewis I have been hounded by Ed Don George. He defeated me in a bout on the Coast early in the year and believes he is my master.

I recently collided with George in Buffalo. We each had scored a fall when the contest was halted under a rule of the New York athletic commission which requires all wrestling bouts to be over by 11 o'clock.

Ready for All

I am quite confident I shall prove George's master when we collide at Braves Field on July 14.

If I am successful in my meeting with George, I shall then have one more score to settle. It will be with Gus Sonnenberg who has beaten me in Boston and in Montreal. There are still many fans who consider Sonnenberg the best wrestler in the world. When we meet again I shall prove that this is not the case.

All wrestlers who think they can defeat me will receive their opportunity to try provided they are accepted by the press and public as legitimate challengers.

Interest in wrestling is increasing everywhere. I can see the day coming when heavyweight championship wrestling bouts will draw as much as do the meetings between the heavyweight boxers.

Mat Shows Thrill

The wrestling boom has been on since Sonnenberg defeated Lewis in Cleveland two years ago last winter. I believe the fans get more thrills at a wrestling show than they do at any other form of sports. The promoters now offer extensive supporting care.

Wrestlers, showing in a main bout one night, do not hesitate to appear in a supporting bout a few evenings later. They are anxious to keep in action, and also to give the fans a run for their money.

As a champion, I shall appear in some of the smaller cities and towns. This is one of the best ways to develop new wrestling fans. Then when a big show is held you find the fans from the small cities and towns traveling hundreds of miles to attend it.

I am in splendid physical condition and ready to prove that I stand with the greatest champions in the history of wrestling.

I want to prove to the world that a Frenchman can be a real champion wrestler as well as a good soldier in time of national distress.

Henri DeGlane is ready for the test.

(The End)

Wrestling Results

(straight falls, 9.30 and 1.01); George McLeod, 210, Nebraska, beat Andre Anderson, 198, California (one fall).

Buckley, Massachusetts Boxing Commission," was charged to Haymarket 4800, which is the telephone number of the State House.

The wording of the two telegrams is such that the State police believe they were sent by somebody well versed in the technicalities of the boxing game.

The police are still working on the case and hope to identify the sender of the two fake telegrams.

Golfer Shoots Birdie and Loses Hole by a Neck

It was the 11th hole at Middlebrook. The doctor whanged one high and far. The ball dropped—and with it a crow, its neck nearly severed.

CORWIN, FULTON WIN 21-HOLE BATTLE

By BILL GRIMES

The first round of the consolation division in the fourth annual Salem Country Club for four-ball invitation was featured by three extra extra-hole matches, one of which figured particularly the only upset of the morning in the elimination of Win Trowbridge and Kenny Nestle, Cohasset.

In the first round yesterday Trowbridge and Nestle were put out by H. H Horton and J. A. Bushell in a 20-hole match, and today it took Arthur Corwin and A. C. Fulton 21 holes to eliminate the Cohasset team.

Trowbridge and Nestle were 2 up at the turn, but they slipped during the inward round and dured at the 19th extra hole, which gave Corwin and Fulton a victory.

The high handicap players, C. W. Bigelow and H. W. Hill, carried Dan Ritchie and Herman Goldberger to the 19th hole During most of the outward round Ritchie and Goldberger trailed, as their opponents took full value of their strokes and they were forced to shoot almost perfect golf to hold Brown and Hill even for the inward nine holes.

Goldberger 4 on 19th Hole; Wins Match

But at the 19th hole Goldberger came up with a four to win the match. In the third extra hole match H. L. Esterbrook and W. E. Meader took a 20-hole verdict over A. E. Lord and J. F. Phelan.

Easterbrook and Meader piled up a three-hole advantage going out and they both snapped coming in to relinquish their lead after they had halved the 19th with 4s. Esterbrook and Meader won the 20th with a par 5 as both of their opponents were in trouble at this hole.

Rod Ritchie Reed and W. T. Burke had the easy match of the day, winning over Page and Hall, 8 and 7, due in a large measure to the fact that Reed was out in 38 with his own ball. Another one-sided match which was also due to poor golf, was the 7 and 6 victory that Phil Rowland and Fred Johnson had up on Harwood and Smithwick.

Rowland and Johnson Make Good Team

Rowland and Johnson teamed up perfectly and were only one over par 4's grass for the 12 holes they played.

D. Palmer and Herbert Winslow, after losing the first five holes to Harrwell and Kemble, came back in the next four to be only one down. The pace was evidently too fast for the veterans for they faded again and lost a 3 to 4 decision

SO. AMERICA TO HEAR N. Y. BOUT

New York, June 25 (AP)—A battle which is attracting much more attention in South America than on the northern continent is on tap at Madison Square Garden tonight. Justo Suarez, Argentina lightweight pride, who may be a real contender for the title held by Tony Canzoneri, clashes with Billy Petrolle, the rugged Fargo (N. D.) "Express," in a ten-round bout.

The colorful little Argentinean has bright prospects, and the start of his second campaign in the United States has stirred up the fight fans of his native country so much that special radio and telephone arrangements, even covering dressing room interviews, have been made in give them the latest and quickest news. It is estimated that more than $50,000 will be spent in the broadcasting.

Petrolle is now rated as leading contender for the lightweight title and must score a decisive victory tonight to hold that rating. If Suarez can win a clean-cut victory he probably will take his opponent's place in line for a title shot.

THOMPSON, BROUILLARD MATCH CALLED OFF

CHAMPION IS REPORTED TO BE ILL

Young Jack Thompson, world's welterweight champion, will be unable to meet Lou Brouillard of Worcester at the Boston Garden next Tuesday night.

The reason: The champion ate crabmeat salad last Tuesday night before packing himself into a bag and has pfomaine poisoning, according to Manager Ray Arcel.

Thompson was supposed to arrive in Boston today. Instead Alvin Ames announced to Matchmaker Ames at his champion was under the care of a flock of doctors in Chicago.

Ames says Alvin has agreed not to allow Thompson to box any place else until he goes through with his engagement with Brouillard.

Ames Denies Thompson Is Ducking Match

Ames denied the charge that Thompson stepped out of his meeting with Brouillard on account of the fact he has virtually signed for a title defense bout against the colorful Jimmy McLarnin at one of the New York ball orchards under the direction of the New York Garden.

It was reported that the advance sale for the Thompson-Brouillard bout has been rather slim as a result of the bad feeling created by Primo Carnera's failure to come here. Thompson was getting $20,000 as his end of the purse while Brouillard have been necessary for the show to draw $13,000 for the Garden to break even.

The show also had a poor position, as it was listed the night before the Sammy Fuller-Steve Halaiko match at Braves Field.

Schaaf and Maloney Next Match in Garden

The Garden will remain dark to boxing until July 10. Ernie Schaaf and Jim Maloney will probably clash on that date. All that remains to cinch this contest is for Johnny Buckley, Schaaf's pilot, and Dan Carroll, manager of Maloney, to do a little signing on the dotted line.

Schaaf and Maloney will not include crabmeat salad on their training menu. With two local favorites in action it is unlikely that the box office will be cricked by an attack of ptomaine poisoning.

Now that the Thompson-Brouillard bout is off for the time being at least, the welterweight boss will not join the long list of champions who have been beaten in the Hub in these trick non-title matches.

Dunn Names Three Officials for Fight

Cleveland, June 25 (AP)—Dick Dunn, promoter of the forthcoming Schmeling-Stribling heavyweight championship fight, said he would present the names of the three men he favors as referee and judges at a meeting of the Cleveland Boxing Commission today.

Dunn's choices are George Blake, James J. Corbett and Rob Edgren, a meeting of the Cleveland Boxing commission.

The promoter will ask that on each night of the fight these three names be placed in a hat and one drawn to act as referee. The other two would be judges.

If Pres. Hoover's Plan Is Adopted by Sports World

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

In baseball, the Philadelphia Athletics agree not to win any more games for the remainder of the season. But Washington, New York and Cleveland must agree not to win any more games from the Red Sox, Detroit, St. Louis or Chicago.

In the National League, the Cardinals will lose to Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, while the Giants and Cubs will withdraw from the League.

The world series will be held on Boston Common between two teams, not in either league.

In the boxing world, Max Schmeling will agree to give back his title to the New York Boxing Commission, which, in turn, will declare Phil Scott heavyweight champion of the world.

England will agree to stand Phil up straight, at least until the talkies are able to screen him.

In the world of golf, all scores made with the light ball will be divided by two, and Tommy Armour will forfeit his British open title to Mahatma Gandhi.

Henri DeGlane, on behalf of relieving the wrestling situation, will declare the heavyweight title vacant and call for a new elimination series, in which the use of teeth will be allowed.

The Bruins hockey team will agree to play without skates and give each visiting club a handicap of 10 goals.

All in favor of adjournment, say "Aye!"

STRIB TO HELP COACH MACON

Geauga Lake, June 25 (AP)—Bill Stribling is going to college next fall to repay Southern football for the services he receives daily at his training camp from Lake Russell, head coach at Mercer University in Macon, Ga.

Russell, a curly headed, 220-pound hunky, played tackle for Tennessee, coached at Carson Newman for seven years, and then shifted over to Mercer in Stribling's home town.

He is training the Southern challenger for his fifteen-round heavyweight title match with Max Schmeling in the Cleveland Municipal Stadium July 9. Bill won't study at Mercer next fall but he will return Lake's favor by teaching his football players something of footwork and the straight arm.

"Stribling's left jab," said Russell in a soft Southern drawl, "is just about the finest thing in the way of a straight arm that could be taught halfbacks and defensive linemen. He's pounised me he'll come over and show the boys something about footwork, too, keeping the weight properly balanced so you can shift quickly in any direction."

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

Loosewrists at play while you make chip shots and short pitches will put more haywire in this department of your play than anything else I know of. The approach calls for precision in the detail of stroking the ball, and precision and loose, floppy wrists do not go together. It is well to take the blade straight back from the ball, but not in the manner pictured here, as you can see the wrists are about to begin to work in a manner that will be sure to introduce too much wrist action. Also the right arm has pushed away from the body and is in bad position for stroking. The clubhead, swing this way, will almost surely get back to the ball ahead of the hands. Keep arms, wrists and club more even in the back swing; restrict wrist play.

OLD TOM ZACHARY TRIBAL MAINSTAY

VETERAN HAS WON 7 OUT OF 10 TILTS

By JOE CASHMAN

Our Braves needn't fear setting any records for consecutive defeats as long as good old Tom Zachary remains on the payroll.

All other Tribal flingers may falter and stumble, but "Lifesaver Tom," in or out of turn, is always able to produce a victory when it is most needed.

Twice since returning to the Wigwam a week ago today, the Warriors have fallen into a slump, and on each occasion the ancient southpaw pulled them out before much damage had been done.

After they had lost three games in a row to the Cubs and Cards, Zach came through with a fourth performance to stop the champions.

Then, after a three-day rest, he returned to halt the Red in the nightcap of Wednesday's doubleheader to give the Tribe its first win in five starts.

Because of his age and the number of years he has pitched in fast company, Tom is not supposed to be effective without a rest of four or five days between games.

Zachary Has Won Seven Out of Ten

He proved that supposition to be he bunk by turning in with ease his seventh win in 10 starts this season, which makes him the Braves' most successful hurler to date, as Ed Brandt, who has won nine, suffered his fourth defeat in the opener of the twin-bill.

That stunt was typical of the veteran portsider. He has been proving everybody wrong as regards his ability for many years.

After he had helped the Washington Senators to win two straight championships, he was adjudged all through and sold down the river to the St. Louis Browns in 1926. He was so far gone that he won 14 games that season and the Solons went to great expense and trouble to get him back again.

Late in the '28 season it was decided once more that his days of usefulness as a big league pitcher were over, and the Senators sent him on his way for a second time, this time to the Yankees.

All he did in New York the next year was win 12 games in as many attempts to finish the campaign undefeated, and with the lowest earned run average of any hurler in the circuit.

Yanks Turned Zachary Loose After Great Year

Then followed one of the strangest baseball happenings ever. Despite his phenomenal showing and the shortage of winning pitchers on the club the Yanks came to the conclusion that he wouldn't be of any more help to them and tried to use him in a trade.

They didn't expect to, and shouldn't have had any trouble disposing of the best hurler in the league, yet not a single club would take him in exchange for even a benchwarmer.

The Yanks' next move was to ask waivers on him and every team in the circuit waived rather than pay $7500 to secure him.

Now Doc Fuchs thought. When the waivers got around to the National League and the Tribal "prexy" had his say he handed Santa Claus Ruppert the price demanded and took Zachary without any questions.

And he has been laughing at his American League brethren ever since, for Old Tom has won 18 games and lost but eight since becoming a Triheaman and he is as effective today as at any time during his 14-year career in the majors.

Now that Zachary has steered the Braves back onto victory trail again, they probably will follow the path for a while, especially since the third-place Chicago Cubs arrive this afternoon to play five games in four days at the Wigwam.

10 Knockouts in Dilboy Post Show

Ten knockouts featured the Dilboy Post, V. F. W., first open-air show of the season at Dilboy Field, Somerville, last night. There were 27 bouts on the program.

The best contest of the night was in the final of the 125-pound class. Joe Barresi of East Boston knocked out Al Hope of South Boston in the third round. Barresi was knocked down twice, first for the count of nine in the first round and again also for the count of nine in the second.

Jack Dorval Signs to Battle Simms

More Horses Due at Rockingham

The Juna Stable, with several of the fastest runners, will move into one of the stables.

A bronze tablet to Nick's memory will be unveiled in the Braves' press box on Saturday afternoon by Nick's mother. BILL CONNELL, of the Boston Evening American sports staff, is shown holding the tablet which reads: Dedicated by the Boston Braves and sport writers of Boston in appreciation and memory of Nick Flatley, a cheerful, original and able writer of life and sports—a generous, loyal friend and a devoted, loving son. ## Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

The tablet to Nick Flatley, late beloved sports editor of the Boston Evening American, which will be placed in the press box at Braves Field with fitting ceremony on Saturday, will perpetuate the memory of the grandest little guy and the finest, fairest and most courageous sports writer we have ever known.

And our hat goes off to Judge Fuchs who conceived the idea of paying this lasting tribute to our departed friend and pal, whose name and reputation will live as long as baseball is played.

Those Red Sox may be down occasionally but they are never out. After being blanked in both ends of a double-header by the Indians, they came back to win the third game and if Bob Kline can beat Walter Miller in the final encounter this p. m., they will leave Cleveland with an even break.

Wiley Moore, starting his first game for the Sox, in 10 weeks, went the distance on the hill for the first time this season, and held the slugging Peckmen to six hits. So effectively was his sinker working that the Fenway outfielders didn't make a single putout during the contest. That must be some kind of a record.

The lowly St. Louis Browns made it two out of three from the world's champion Athletics yesterday, but the Macks still have a two and a half game lead, as the second-place Senators lost to the Tigers.

Babe Ruth is slowly but surely climbing up on the leaders in the home-run race. He knocked out his 15th circuit drive while the Yanks were beating the White Sox yesterday. That puts him in a tie with his teammate, Lou Gehrig, for leadership in the American League and leaves him only three behind "Chuck" Klein of the Phillies.

The St. Louis Cardinals increased their lead in the National League race to three and a half games by taking the Phils into camp twice while the Giants were splitting with the Cubs.

The National League magnates, at a meeting in New York yesterday, gave the new and supposedly slower ball and the new sacrifice fly rule their approval. It was revealed that Rogers Hornsby, Cubs' pilot, has been the greatest sufferer as a result of the anti-scientific law. It has cost the Rajah 16 points.

RYDER CUP PLAY ON TOMORROW

Columbus, O., June 25 (AP)—The balloon ball goes up for an international trial tomorrow in one of the biggest golfing shows of 1931—the Ryder Cup matches between teams of home-bred British and American professionals.

Captain Walter Hagen's forces will carry the home colors into battle as favorites to win the two-day competition over the rugged layout of the Scioto Country Club.

The invaders, led by Captain Charles Whitcombe, have found Scioto an exceedingly troublesome battleground, in addition to manifesting a marked prejudice against the American ball.

Cotton's arrival in Columbus revived rumors that last-minute measures would result in his inclusion on the team, despite his previous refusal to play because of the restrictions imposed. Fred Pignon, manager of the British team, said no changes in the team were contemplated.

The rival captains, after a good deal of jockeying and master-minding, were stated to pick their line-ups today for the four Scotch foursomes. Friday, and the eight singles contests, Saturday, all to be over the 36-hole route.

Hagen Hopes to Meet Duncan

Hagen hopes to settle an old feud with Duncan if the latter is drawn for the singles. The 47-year-old Briton, dean of the invaders, has never lost a singles match in the international pro battles. Twice he has conquered Hagen, the last time by the lopsided margin of 10 and 8.

Denny Shute's victory over Frank Walsh in the play-off for a place on the American team may herald the benching of Horton Smith or Craig Wood.

The expectations was that Hagen would pair his men in the foursomes as follows: Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel and Al Espinosa, Hagen and Willy Cox. Densmore Shute and Billie Burke, Sarazen, Diegel, Farrell and Hagen are veterans of all the Ryder Cup competition. Cox, Shute and Burke won places in the homebred ranks for the first time.

The probable British pairings for tomorrow, based upon the way they lined up in final practice rounds: Charles Whitcombe and Syd Easterbrook, Abe Mitchell and Fred Robson, Ernest Whitcombe and Bert Hodson, Archie Compston and Billie Davies.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

"I hear," said Mr. Boston, "that Ernie Schaaf and Jim Maloney are virtually matched for a return bout at the Boston Garden on July 10. Shamus is already doing road work along the Washington boulevard. Two Gun Baker keeps the road clear for him.

"Ernie Schaaf is training at Toland's for a bout with Jim Furch at Williams at West Springfield on next Monday night. The New England heavyweight champion stepped into a shoe factory in Randolph and purchased six pairs of $15 shoes.

Mr. Boston

"But Silva says Horatio Vaiha can lick any welterweight in the world over the 15-round distance. Saw Bat at Toland's talking with Joe Rivers, oldtime Gloucester boxer, who once stopped Silva. Now they're pals. Rivers and K. O. Muggsy are the only two who ever were credited with knyos over Silva.

"Andy Martin of the South End steps in with Matty White in Philadelphia next Monday.

"Jack Sharkey told me he weighed 202½ pounds following a strenuous workout. Danny Reagan and Jack Dudley have been signed to act as sparring partners for the American heavyweight champion, who will battle Mickey Walker for the Milk Fund on July 23.

Steve Halaiko Is Real Rival for Fuller

"The boys who know their cauliflower tell me Sammy Fuller will have to step lively if he is to grab the title when he meets Steve Halaiko in a 10-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Braves Field next Monday night. Halaiko won a decision over Sammy Mandell, former world's lightweight champion, in a tussle at Rochester, and stopped Jack Kennedy in his last appearance in this city.

Crosscup-Pishon Post Opens Wrestling Drive

"I found Alex MacLean talking razzling with Frank Smith and Joe Ayers when I stepped in Paul Bowser's office. Alex predicts that the finish wrestling bout between Henri DeGlane, world's champion, and Ed Don George at Braves Field on July 14 under the direction of the Cross-up-Pishon Post will draw $80,000.

"Red and Blue armies have been organized by the legion to push the ticket sale. 'Col.' Jack Hurley is in charge of one army, 'Col.' Ed Gleason director of the other army. They will do their stuff under the direction of Commander-in-Chief Hal R. McNamee and Adjutant Bill Longworthy.

"Andy Callahan's injured jaw is okay again and he's back in the gym. Also saw Jack McCarthy, who has been out of commission with a bad hand, punching away at the big bag."

POLITICS

Notes and Gossip About People You Know

HOW OLD IS JERRY?

Ward 18 has a political mystery—the age of James A. (Jerry) Watson, politico veteran, and candidate for the council. He had a birthday yesterday, and like the old question "How old is Ann?" the same answer fits "Jerry." He assumed a woman's prerogative by declining to tell. He did admit, however, that an admirer sent him a pineapple cake two days ahead of time as a birthday gift. He also received a necktie from the missus.

LONG, THE TIRELESS

William P. Long, chairman of Boston Park Commission, seldom takes any exercise, although he supplies the youth of Boston with facilities with which to play tennis and golf and to swim. He is so busy that 24 hours a day aren't enough for him. His daily exercise consists of a two-mile after dinner walk before retiring.

CUPID STILL ON JOB

The figures for June marriage licenses in this city are running neck and neck with those of last year, according to James J. Mulvey, city registrar of births, marriages and deaths. To date this month 736 licenses have been issued, two more than the year for the same period. The total for the year to date is 3295, or 771 fewer than last year for the same time.

FLOWERS HIS HOBBY

Growing flowers is the zest of Cape Cod to the hobby of Health Commissioner Dr. Francis X. Mahoney. Instead of taking a long vacation, he week-ended at his cottage at Buzzards Bay.

"I love all varieties of flowers," said Mahoney, "it is pretty hard to grow them in the sand, and that's the fun I get out of it."

SHE'S TORONTO'S GUEST

Miss Elizabeth Herlihy, secretary of the city planning board, is a guest of the city of Toronto Canada, at luncheons today following her attendance at the national convention on city planning at Rochester, N. Y., since last Monday.

FOLEY IS CHALLENGED

A challenge has been issued by Senator James J. Twohig to Dist. Atty. William J. Foley as to the correct outcome of the recent ball game in which Foley got a three-base hit from Pitcher Twohig. Two-Mig's "all stars" offer to meet Foley's "Blackstones" June 30, at 1:30 p. m., at Braves Field. Two-Mig says the team with a corpse on second will have got a home run on that Foley hit.

DEWOLF ADDS TO GALLERY

"Clint" DeWolf, secretary to Governor Ely, has added a few pictures to those hanging on the walls of his secretary's office at the State House. They include Senator David I. Walsh, Governor Ely and Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York.

WALLACE BOOMED

Rep. Lewis R. Sullivan of Dorchester is backing Alvin M. Wallace, past department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars for the city position created by the Legislature, that of second deputy commissioner of State aid and pensions.

DANCE TEAM AT GARDENS

Rene Cordoba

Maurice and Cordoba, ballroom dancers featured at Shore Gardens, have for several seasons achieved wide popularity in the night clubs throughout the country.

Miss Rene Cordoba is a striking brunette. They have appeared at the Club Richman, at the Lido beach Country Club on Long Island at El Patio, at Delmonico's with Morton Downey, at the Embassy Club in Miami, with "Take the Air," "Vanities," "The New Yorkers" and other smart musical revues.

Daily True Story

"Hram, "I want you to meet the gentleman who is responsible for having rescued you."

He pressed a button and in walked Sent Bradley.

"Ben!"

After the first hesitant reconciliation and embracea, Ben remarked:

"My pride didn't allow me to make the first overtures after that ridiculous quarrel of ours. But when I heard you were being stalked by the fortune hunter I had to act. And when I suddenly read of your marriage announcement, I pulled old Martin Healy out of bed to do something. Pretty good, eh?"

"You bet," rejoined Gladys, laughing; "tell me what was that ridiculous quarrel of ours about anyway?"

To Conceal Reductions in Navy

To hide from the American people its new sapping expedition to undermine their Navy, the Republican Administration has resorted to a new "gag" order to choke the Navy Department into complete and subservient silence.

This "gag" order comes at the time when the Republican Party in power is endeavoring to make a political showing of economy that will aid it in the coming Presidential campaign.

This "gag" order is designed to prevent the public from getting any inkling of further drastic reductions in the Navy until it is too late for the broadcasting of the facts to influence the preparation of the budget.

Already the Republican Party has reduced by 4800 the inadequate enlisted personnel of the Navy, in spite of the fact that between five and six million men have been thrown out of work through no fault of their own.

Already the Republican Party has reduced by twenty-five per cent the number of midshipmen at Annapolis, in spite of the fact that the Navy Department appealed for an increase of twenty-five per cent.

These reductions in the enlisted and commissioned personnel of the Navy are a body blow to its effectiveness.

These reductions will compel the elimination from the fleet of older ships, in order to man the new ships soon to be commissioned.

These reductions will deprive the new ships of an adequate complement of trained officers, because the Navy is far behind in its training schedule.

In order to officer the ships now under construction, the Navy must have in training at Annapolis for the next ten years five midshipmen for every Senator and Representative in Congress.

In spite of this necessity, the Republican Party has reduced from four to three the number of midshipmen per national legislator, instead of increasing that number from four to five per national legislator.

As a result of this indefensible raid upon our national university at Annapolis by the Republican politicians in power, that great institution during the next academic year will have in training only one-half of the number of midshipmen for which facilities for training have been provided.

This is a flagrant example of the false economy which the Republican Party is resorting to in a cunning attempt to divert the attention of the Republic from its waste and extravagance in other directions.

The Pathway of Plenty

Depression consists of a state of affairs in which men of business do not know what to do with their energies and tools.

With demand restricted, there seems to be no incentive to pile up unwanted stores of merchandise.

But, with millions undernourished and inadequately clad, it is stupid to assume that there is genuine overproduction.

At its recent convention, the members of the Advertising Federation of America performed a national service in focussing the attention of the country on the way out of the economic dilemma.

In a resolution it adopted the federation subscribed to the principle that:

"Business cannot realize its full development except through the widest possible distribution among the creators of wealth of an equable share of the profits of production and of the time economies made possible by the development of machinery."

The resolution concluded that "we hold this to be evident because no matter how great may be the advertising man's ability to create desire, such desire cannot become effective in producing business unless, behind the want, lies a financial ability to satisfy it."

Thus the practical requirements of modern business coincide with the dictates of social justice.

It is time that the spokesmen for capital had the wisdom to espouse this sound doctrine, which heretofore found champions mainly among spokesmen for labor.

Owners of capital, which consists of claims on society, have a special interest in making certain that the economic machine functions effectively.

They urged a policy of reckless overcapitalization, with economic mergers and unwarranted stock split-ups.

The effort of the speculative financiers was to garner in for capital most of the benefits which came from greater economy and heightened efficiency in production.

Work-days were not shortened in consonance with the redoubled efficiency resulting from labor-saving machines.

Accordingly, in time there resulted a lack of equilibrium between the product of industry and the purchasing power of consumers.

The new aim of business statesmen is to restore economic balance.

The road to this desirable goal lies in giving workers, who are by the same token consumers, a larger share of the social output. The advocates of destructive wage-cutting overlook the fundamental needs of the business situation.

The ad men made a timely and effective plea for translating business efficiency into social welfare.

Those Timetables

If there is anyone more helpless than the woman with an armful of bundles in a telephone booth it is the commuter at the South Station trying to solve the mysteries of the modern timetable.

Einstein solved relativity and to him the fourth dimension is as simple as chess to Capablanca, but he would be a marvel indeed if he could remember unfailingly whether the trains depart an hour earlier or an hour later.

Perhaps the railroads would like to make Einsteins out of all of us. If so, they can contribute thereto by publishing some timetables in daylight time.

Daylight time happens to be the law of Massachusetts. But the law, like the Constitution among friends, commands about as much attention these days as a father at the wedding reception of his eldest daughter.

Forked Lightning

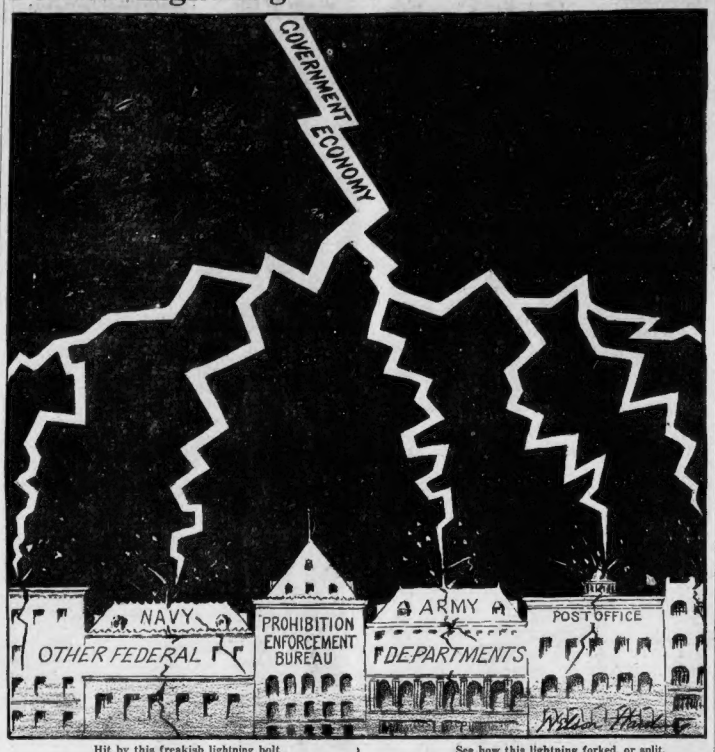
By NELSON HARDING



Hit by this freakish lightning bolt
Most buildings get an awful jolt
Excepting one which bears a charm
That makes it quite immune to harm.

See how this lightning forked, or split,
And notice where it didn't hit.
It's strange to see the lightning play

The Martins

The Martins are peculiar and whimsical at best,
They're very charming tenants if with you they choose to nest;
But though the house you build for them may perfect seem to be
You cannot coax them into it if something wrong they see.

I only know they like a house with room for sight or ten,
And it must stand above the ground, full fourteen feet or more
With unimpeded space about for them to wheel and soar.

The neighborhood must suit their choice; the gardens must be neat,
Nor will they stay to raise their young along a noisy street,
And many a man has built a house their fellowship to win
Which for some cause, to him unknown, they would not enter in.

And if they do not like the place you'll see their charms no more
But should the home their fancies suit, within a day or two

New York Day by Day

Oriental Tricksters

NEW YORK, June 25—The most baffling tricksters in the illegal traffic of narcotics are said to be those roaming peddlars of Oriental rugs—the swarthy, hawk-nosed Ishmaels with rings in their ears. Some are honestly selling their wares, but a pronounced number are drug hawkers.

Many graduate from the Paris boulevards where dope restrictions are not so tight. They have a sly innocence and have so perfected their system they are seldom caught. Even if arrested the most careful search fails to reveal any drugs.

Among the guild is a remarkable sign langue that narcotic sleuths have been unable to master. The signals are known only to the confirmed addict who knows the danger of betrayal and is grateful for an ever ready and quick source of supply.

Holding a certain rug before a buyer indicates a supply of morphine cocaine or heroin. Twisting the rug, making certain passes and other varying gestures tell where the stuff can be delivered and the price. And not a word need be spoken.

If a sale is through the sign language the delivery may be made later through a waiter, a hat check girl or a taxi driver at the curb. Collectors call later for payment. Drug addicts always pay their dope bills. They know if they don't their supply will be cut off.

These transactions are swift and astonishingly mysterious, eyeballing the cunning of drug slaves. Columbus Circle, after midnight, was once a reputed distributing center. But latterly it is said to be one of many rooms in a hotel in the Times Square area, the number changing nightly.

Swiftly changing New York has obliterated almost the last vestige of its Dutch origin. At the lower tip of the Dutch Breedweg, which the English turned into the name Broadway, there were white houses with the grace of swans coming through arches, shining Holland fronts, fish-scale-like bright tiled roofs and brass knockers. All have vanished.

The most indefatigable entertainers in New York social circles are said to be the Frank V. Storrs.

Scarcely an evening when in New York or at Palm Beach or the Riviera they do not have from 10 to 30 guests.

One of the most entrancing sight views of New York is looking southward from a 50-some story alcove at the Hotel Pierre. Broadway becomes a dull glow-worm, spangled higher up by the sorcery of bewitching lights. Here and there grooved in the darkness are the faintly luminous spires of Chrysler, the Empire and other towers. And most beautiful of all is the minaret of the Grand Central building arching Park Avenue like a splotch of phosphorous. Such views make me depressingly aware of the futility of words. Right now I'd like to toss the typewriter out the window. Nor would I care if I grazed the cop on our beat who yelled: "It will be white-washed tomorrow for you," when my toe hit a misplaced brick this a. m.

I believe half the awe of headwaiters is because of their names. There is something hands-off-ish about such maitre d'hotel titles as Jacques, Henri, Theodor and Gustave. Named Sam, Ike or Al I am certain they would lose more than half the imperial glamour. I have a friend whose valet came to him as Pinkie. The minute his acquaintances heard the name, Pinkie was the target for free and easy kidding. He was finally dismissed. Two years later he was taken back by under the name of Hodkinson. With that name nobody kidded.

An occasional caller is a steward on a French boat, attached to my cabin during several crossings. I also met his young son who usually came to the Havre dock to meet him. Today I asked about the lad. His eyes quickly filled and with a Gallic sweep of his hand said: "Finis!" and I don't know whether the boy passed away, disgraced his father or got married.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Husbands Disappointing

NO HUSBAND is the answer to a maiden's prayer.

There's the gist of that June GOOD HOUSEKEEPING article by Frances Parkinson Keyes, wife of Henry W. Keyes of New Hampshire.

There isn't any ideal Prince Charming.

No Perfect Male, with all the askings.

If he has one thing, he hasn't another. If he can corral cash like John D., it's a cinch he can't croon like Rudy.

If, on the other hand, he's the Marcelled Marvel, you may have to rustle your own rent money. If he's long on athletics, he's probably short on aesthetics. And if he carries an Outsize Brain, how's he going to regard your pea-wee line of patter?

So, pick 'em carefully as you may, husbands are bound to be disappointing.

But then—though Mrs. Keyes doesn't carry it this far—so are wives. So is marriage. And that's not the fault of the wife or the marriage. It's the fault of our own foolish fancy.

Elsie Robinson

We expect too much from husbands, wives and marriage. We expect things that no husband, wife or mating could possibly produce.

We expect they'll make us happy and keep us contented. We expect they'll quiet our questioning, settle our restlessness, dispel our loneliness, remove our blunders and smooth out our peeves. But that's utterly unreasonable! The best man on earth couldn't do that for any woman, even though he had all the money, manner and love technique the most romantic maiden might desire. And the best woman on earth couldn't do that for a man, although she were a combination Saint Cecilia—Lady Astor—Greta Garbo and Hoover Cabinet.

For keeping happy and curing our cussedness is OUR OWN PERSONAL JOB. And no one and nothing . . . save our own selves nd our own personal efforts . . . can do it for us.

But Life is a greater.

And you'll still have to live your own life and solve your own problems, even though you have found the most perfect love. Love will help you with that job, but not half as much as you thought, in the first dizzy throes of romance. Even the most perfect love cannot penetrate the secret places of your heart. Regardless of your chosen companion, you will ALWAYS be lonely, you will ALWAYS be bewildered and restless and dissatisfied. Some secret part of you will continue to reach out wanting something different, wanting something more, after you are married as well as before. But these are the inevitable conditions of life—of growth—and love can't cure them.

Why are husbands and wives bound to be disappointing? That's why. We expect too much of them and of marriage. Our romantic tradition has assured us that they will iron out all our personal difficulties and make life a rosy dream. Then, when they don't and can't, we feel that we've been cheated and that marriage is a failure.

What's the secret of marriage? To get along with the other fellow? To find the one right man or woman with whom you can get along? No. THE SECRET OF MARRIAGE IS TO BE ABLE TO GET ALONG WITH YOURSELF AND CONSUME YOUR OWN SMOKE.
